

DETROIT—A muffled thud, a skittering of sparks arcing upward, a heart-beat's pause and then the first rolling road and cannonade. Lightning, blockbusters, flying fish and aerial bombs light the night sky as fireworks mark the opening of the International Freedom Festival, a salute to the American Fourth of July and Dominion Day for Canadian neighbors across the Detroit River. Lighted buildings of downtown Detroit can be seen in the foreground while the lights of Windsor, Canada, are clearly visible in the background. (UPI)

Story of Survival

Liberty Bell a Treasured Symbol of US Independence

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Surviving despite threatened bombing, burial and years of neglect, the Liberty Bell has become one of the most treasured symbols of American independence — even though the city of Philadelphia once tried to get rid of it as a piece of junk.

Today, the anniversary of American independence, hundreds will visit Independence Hall, touch the bell, poke a finger into its giant crack and read the Biblical quotation on it, "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Prophetic though it is, the quotation has nothing at all to do with the Declaration of Independence and American liberty.

The 2,000-pound bell was cast in the 1750s for the tower of the red brick Pennsylvania capitol in Philadelphia. It was made in Whitechapel, England.

Around the top, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of William Penn's Charter of Privileges, was the quotation, from Leviticus, about liberty.

But when the colonists first tried to ring it in March 1753, it cracked.

Two local men, John Pass and Charles Stow Jr., recast it with extra copper.

They swung the bell. Clank.

"Upon trial," wrote House Speaker Isaac Norris, "it seems they added too much copper . . . and were so teased with the witticisms of the town, they had a new mold."

Finally, in May 1753, the new bell was hoisted again into the steeple of the capitol.

The bell rang on many occasions as it called legislators to work, tolled funerals or signaled major events.

In 1776 the second Continental Congress met in the old state house. On July 4, 1776, the giant bell in the steeple remained silent — the Declaration of Independence was adopted in executive session.

But on July 8, presumably like other bells in the city, the bell rang out the American colonies' defiance, as the Declaration was publicly announced.

When the British took over Philadelphia during the war the Liberty Bell, like others, was put on a cart and hustled north. It was buried beneath the floor of the Zion Reformed Church in Allentown, Pa., for almost a year.

Brought back to Philadelphia after the war, it was rung many times, until, says legend, it cracked tolling the death of Su-

Incidents In Queen's Visit To Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A brick and a bottle were thrown at the royal car in separate incidents today as Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip drove through Belfast.

As the queen was leaving city hall after a civic luncheon and reception, a beer bottle smashed into the roadway almost under the wheels of her maroon bubble-top Rolls-Royce. The car did not stop but continued its slow progress.

A couple of blocks further on, in Great Victoria Street, a brick was thrown which apparently hit a fender. It seemed to come from a building site where a number of men were on scaffolding.

A witness of the incident near the city hall said: "A fair-haired woman in her 50s came out of the International Hotel carrying what appeared to be a bottle wrapped in paper. As the royal car was passing, she threw it and it landed beside one of the wheels. The Duke of Edinburgh saw the incident and appeared to look startled."

Apparently not many people saw the bottle thrown, and no attempt was made to interfere with the woman. Detectives hustled her back into the hotel.

Eleven Die So Far In State Traffic

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic accidents in Missouri during the Fourth of July holiday have taken the lives of 11 persons.

Thirty three persons were killed during the Independence Day weekend in 1965.

Joseph Warren, 51, Newburg, Mo., was killed early Monday in an accident involving a tractor-trailer truck on Interstate 44, two miles west of Rolla. The Highway Patrol said Charles Flanary, Springfield, Mo., driver of the truck, reported he had hit Warren's pickup truck which was stopped on the highway without lights.

Linda Stoker, 15, Dexter, Mo., was killed Sunday in a one-car crash on Missouri 51, one-half mile south of Arab in Bollinger County. She was a passenger in a car which struck a bridge rail after a tire blew out.

Mrs. Denny Sue Diamond, 19, Bridgeton, Mo., was killed Sunday in a one-car crash on Interstate 55 three miles south of Scott City.

The highway patrol said Mrs. Diamond was a passenger in a convertible driven by her husband, Johnnie Diamond, 20. The patrol said he apparently went to sleep and the car ran across the medial strip and off a 60-foot embankment into a creek. Diamond was seriously injured and was hospitalized at Cape Girardeau.

Three members of a Lee's Summit family were killed Saturday night in a collision between their car and a tractor-trailer truck about 12 miles southeast of Warsaw. They were Harry Jordan, 36, and two of his sons, Harry Wayne, 9, and Perry Lynn, 7. A daughter, Brenda Lee, a twin of Perry, is in good condition in a Sedalia hospital. Mrs. Jordan and two other children were not in the car.

Edward Jess Baird, Jr., 27, St. Louis was fatally injured in a motorcycle accident on Missouri 53 two miles south of Poplar Bluff. The crash occurred

Larned Riot Ends Monday With Release

Seven Hostages Had Been Held For Seven Hours

LARNED, Kan. (AP)—A riot at the Larned state hospital ended early Sunday with the release of seven hostages who had been held 7½ hours in the ward for insane criminals.

Eleven patients smashed furniture and windows, armed themselves with clubs, scissors, and a bottle of cleaning fluid and barricaded the west wing of the security hospital. They threatened to make Molotov cocktails with the fluid.

Seven psychiatric aides were seized. Four suffered abrasions on the head.

The inmates demanded, and got, a conference with state officials about alleged grievances over the way the ward is run.

Dr. Robert Haines, state institutional director, and Charles McAtee, state prison director, were rushed to Larned from Topeka by plane. Dr. Evert Larsson, staff psychiatrist in charge of hospital security, was brought to the hospital from his home in Hutchinson by highway patrol car.

The hostages were released within 15 minutes after Haines and McAtee arrived.

"You met our first demand," yelled one of the inmates, referring to the arrival of the officials. "If you're playing ball with us, we'll play ball with you. Here they (the hostages) are."

The seven aides, along with four inmates who also had been held in the ward, walked out of the door.

At the insistence of the inmates, three newsmen took part in the conference. The rioters picked Ted McCoy and Bob Dundas of Great Bend and Frank Santiago of Hutchinson to represent the 25 newsmen at the scene.

Remove Old Fair Railway To Add Parking Spaces

About 3,000 feet of old Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad line inside the Missouri State Fairgrounds since around 1907, will be removed Tuesday to give the fair an estimated 600 additional parking spaces, it was reported today.

Wilbert C. Askew, secretary of the fair, said removal of the old rails will provide parking space for an estimated 600 vehicles along the south perimeter fence of the fair grounds.

In an interview C. F. Brick, Boonville, road master for the Katy, said the rails along the south fence had been in existence since about 1907.

At that time, he said, the Katy would bring Fair visitors directly into the grounds along the spur line and stop at what is now the carpentry shop on the fairgrounds. That shop used to be a depot from which passengers would be shuttled all over the grounds.

New Blows At Oil Storage; Wreck Hanoi Missile Area

Cong Ground Unit Flees As Bombardment Begins

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. fighter-bombers kept up the intensive air war against North Viet Nam, striking another blow at a strategic oil depot near the port of Haiphong and wrecking a surface-to-air missile site 15 miles west of Hanoi.

Three Soviet-designed missiles were fired at the Air Force pilots who let loose their five-inch rockets against the launcher. One exploded close enough to the four F105 Thunderchiefs to send vibrations through the supersonic planes but did no damage, a spokesman said.

Red China Threatens Aid Increase

Claim US Plans To Send Ground Forces Into Laos

TOKYO (AP) — Red China, on the heels of a veiled threat to increase aid to North Viet Nam, charged today that the United States planned to send ground forces into Laos.

Peking Radio coupled the accusation with a fresh outburst of invective flowing from the U.S. air raids on fuel depots near Hanoi and Haiphong last Wednesday.

The Chinese Foreign Ministry charged the United States with "making active preparations for sending its ground forces into Laos."

The statement added: "At the instigation of the United States, military personnel of Thailand and South Viet Nam have successfully infiltrated into the areas of central and lower Laos."

Just as the denunciations of the U.S. air attacks, the Peking statement did not say what if anything the Chinese would do to meet the alleged American challenge.

A government statement Sunday said that last Wednesday's U.S. bombings "now has freed us from any bounds or restrictions" in supporting the North Vietnamese Communist regime. Although the declaration contained an implied threat to intensify its attacks, it said (Please Turn to Page 8, Col. 8)

Three Drown On State Weekend

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three persons drowned over the weekend in Missouri.

Two drowned in the Meramec River.

Paul Richard West, 31, Springfield, Ohio, drowned while swimming in the stream west of St. Louis. John Bishop, 22, Warrenton, Mo., lost his life in the river near Moselle Saturday.

His brother, William, 20, was rescued. Walter O. Rider, Jr., 13, Nevada, Mo., drowned Sunday in Kernodle's Lake at the south edge of Kansas City. His body was recovered. The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Rider, Sr., Nevada, was visiting his grandmother in Belton, Mo.

Accidental Shooting Near Salisbury

SALISBURY, Mo. (AP) — A three-year-old girl was the victim of an apparent accidental shooting Sunday near Salisbury.

Police said Eleanor Nickerson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nickerson, was struck by a .22 caliber rifle bullet.

The Nickersons were traveling south of Salisbury on a gravel road when, Nickerson related to officers, they stopped to allow their son Richard, 17, to shoot at a bird.

Nickerson told them the youth was getting back into the station wagon when the gun discharged, striking Eleanor. She was pronounced dead on arrival at a physician's office in Salisbury.

Celebrate 190th US Anniversary

Major Observance Centers Around Independence Hall

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — With fireworks, parades and patriotic speeches, the United States celebrated the 190th anniversary of independence today.

The nation's observance centered on Independence Hall where Undersecretary of State George W. Ball was the scheduled speaker.

Despite soaring temperatures — the mercury reached 104 degrees here Sunday — a spokesman for the National Park Service said he expected one of the largest crowds of the year to visit Independence Hall where the Declaration of Independence was adopted July 4, 1776.

Because Ball is a spokesman for the administration and its position in Viet Nam, demonstrators, both for and against, said they would appear today.

President Johnson shunned the speakers' platform, electing to take it easy at the family ranch in Texas with Mrs. Johnson, daughter Luci and her fiancée Pat Nugent. Lynda, his other daughter, is in Spain.

Across the nation, Americans had their choice of a day of fun in the sun, on the beaches or in the mountains, or participation in patriotic ceremonies.

The weather map showed that today would be another scorching in much of the country.

In Minnesota, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said he would drive from his home town of Waverly in his 1931 Model A Ford to nearby Delano to appear in a July 4th parade.

In Wisconsin, Milwaukee started its Independence Day celebration on Friday with a Duke Ellington concert and an appearance by Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic Saturday night. The concerts, both free, drew a total of more than 50,000. An estimated 500,000 were expected to watch today's annual circus parade in Milwaukee.

At Winston-Salem, N.C., the Independence Day celebration featured Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler as speaker. The festivities there centered in Salem, the old portion of the city. Salem claims that its July 4th celebration in 1783 was the first official celebration in the United States.

The President and Mrs. Johnson attended religious services Sunday at the tiny St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church in Blanco, 23 miles southeast of the ranch. Johnson drove his own car to and from the church.

The lay vicar, Edwin A. Thayer, asked the congregation to pray for Luci Johnson, who observed her 19th birthday Saturday.

Luci and her fiancée, Pat Nugent, attended services at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Fredericksburg, 15 miles east of the ranch. They will be married Aug. 6 in Washington.

The Johnsons' older daughter, Lynda, is vacationing in Europe.

Crash Snuffs Out the Lives Of Ten People

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A two-car crash in Arizona snuffed out 10 lives and two Arkansas accidents killed 11 other persons as the grim July 4th holiday weekend auto death toll mounted today.

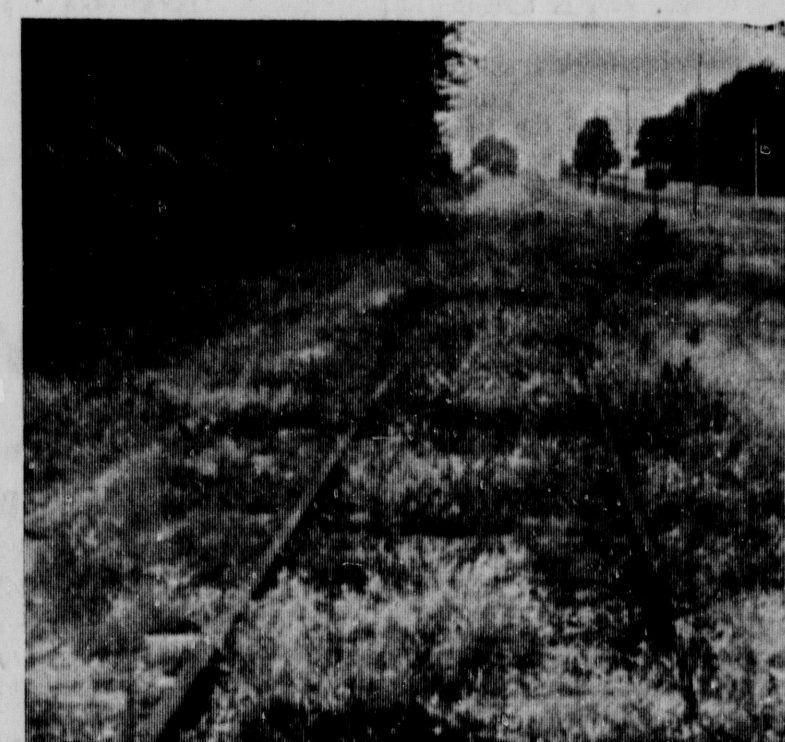

The auto toll stood at 394 on the last day of the 78-hour holiday. Boating accidents killed 25 others and 105 persons drowned. The National Safety Council estimated that by the time the count ends at midnight (local time) today, between 510 and 610 persons will die in traffic. The count began 6 p.m. (local time) Friday.

Two cars collided head on 30 miles west of Tucson Sunday and all the occupants were killed. Police said all of the dead were Indians from Arizona.

That was the worst single accident. But Arkansas police reported two separate crashes within five hours Sunday which killed 11 others. The first, a three-car pileup near Brytheville, killed six. Five hours later, a head-on crash near Benton killed five.

The Safety Council predicted Sunday that "if traffic deaths continue at their present rate, it will exceed not only last year's Fourth of July, but possibly the Labor Day weekend of 1965."

The Labor Day weekend set a record for any summer holiday — 575 persons killed in traffic. The July 4, 1965, weekend saw 551 die. A four-day July 4 ob-

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I married 18 months ago, for the first time. I was 33 years of age and had no previous sex experience. My husband is a wonderful man and we get along well together.

When I told my friends and family that I waited a long time for the right man to come along I wasn't kidding.

Last December my husband had an accident which has left him impotent. At first the doctor thought it might be temporary, but now we know that his disability is permanent. What I'd like to know, Ann, is this: Do you think we can have a good marriage under these abnormal conditions? I dread the thought of a divorce because I know I would suffer great loneliness with out my husband. He insists that I am being cheated out of a vital part of marriage and that he would not blame me if I left him. (This attitude is typical of his selfishness.)

I can't take the chance of revealing my identity for obvious reasons. Will you please refine this letter and make it printable?—MRS. ANONYMOUS.

Dear Mrs.: I didn't have to "refine" your letter. It is printable as you wrote it.

When you took your marriage vows, you agreed to stay at the side of your beloved "in sickness and in health." Well—this is sickness. A woman who marries at 33 with no previous sex experience has either a very low sex drive or lofty standards, coupled with beautiful self-discipline—or all three. Whatever the combination, it can be called back into service.

I suggest that you adopt a couple of children and adjust to the abnormality. You can have a full life in spite of it. The operative word is "sublimation." Easy? Of course not, but certainly not impossible.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband just told me to write to Ann Landers about the problem we are having around here. So here I am.

We have two teen-age children, plus one who will be a teenager in a few years. I am 43 years old, but I am young in spirit. Our oldest boy and girl are at the phone-grabbing stage and they both do a lot of talking after supper. When the phone rings during the evening, it's usually for one of them, so I don't answer. When they are out, I DO answer—and this is where the problem comes in.

The children's teen-age friends seem to enjoy talking to me. I'm not ashamed to admit that I can talk with them for hours about nothing in particular and I love it! Is this so terrible? My husband seems to think it is. In fact, last night he came right out and told me to act my age.

I enjoy my own teen-agers and I work with other teens at the Red Cross center. Teen-agers today are a great bunch and I see nothing wrong in being friendly to them when they telephone. I'd like your opinion.—YOUNG AT HEART.

Dear Heart: If a teen-ager calls specifically to talk to you when your children are at home, you can then be sure that you are on solid ground. When they call and ask for Jimmie or Suzy, however, exchange a few pleasant sentences and get off the horn, Mother.

I think it's terrific that you feel so warmly toward your children's friends, but honestly, Doll, the kids really don't phone to talk to you.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. C 1966, Publishers Newspaper Syndicate.

HONOLULU (AP) — John F. Kennedy Jr., who suffered burns in a Hawaiian beach campfire mishap, underwent minor surgery in Honolulu Sunday and the plastic surgeon who performed it predicted the 5-year-old son of the late president would be completely recovered within two weeks.

The surgery by Dr. Eldon Dykes consisted primarily of breaking blisters which resulted from burns suffered last Thursday.

John stumbled backward on the hot coals of a campfire while he was picnicking with his mother, Jacqueline; sister, Caroline, 9, and cousin, Sidney Lawford, on a beach on Hawaii Island.

The family arrived in Hawaii June 5 and was originally scheduled to return to New York Tuesday but Mrs. Kennedy has announced the visit will be extended indefinitely.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Harold Berger and Lawrence Pier seem to do things alike.

They're both 20. They grew up in the same Milwaukee neighborhood. They went to the same schools. They were drafted into the Army at almost the same time last fall.

Pier was sent to Viet Nam in April, and Berger in May.

Pier was wounded in June and received a Purple Heart.

Berger's wife, Jeanne, 19, read about the decoration in a newspaper and sent a clipping to her husband with this warning: "Just because Larry got a Purple Heart, don't you go matching him up."

Mrs. Berger got a letter Saturday from her husband which said: "I got hit only a few hours after I read your last letter telling me that Larry got a Purple Heart. Wow, so do I now."

EAGLES MERE, Pa. (AP) — An actor, an actress and a director — en route to a summer stock company engagement — and their pilot walked away apparently uninjured after a single-engine plane overshot a runway and crashed Sunday.

Actress Rosemary Prinz and actor Cliff Goodwin were on their way to appear in "Two for the Seesaw," which is to begin a two-week run at the Eagles Mere Playhouse near Towanda in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Traveling with them was Robert Maitland, who is directing the play.

The pilot, Lee Gilbert, said he mistook a hump in the ground for the midpoint of the small airport's runway. The hump turned out to be the end.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While directing traffic in Philadelphia's 100-plus heat Sunday Patrolman John Gunning noticed a man removing a battery from a car parked nearby.

Gunning strolled over to the car, and remarked, "Hot work."

"Sure is," the man replied. "Need any help?" Gunning asked.

"No," said the man. "I'm just trying to get this battery out so I can have it recharged."

"Maybe you had better come with me," said Gunning, putting a hand on the man's arm. "That happens to be my car."

The prisoner, identified as Philip Atterton, 38, was charged with burglary, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Clergymen's Sons Fight Own Battle

By ROBERT POOS
Associated Press Writer

PLEIKU, Viet Nam (AP) — Three clergymen's sons are among five officers leading a U. S. Army detachment trying to woo inhabitants of South Viet Nam's central highlands away from communism and to the side of the South Vietnamese government.

It is a tough job — the Viet Cong also is adept at psychological warfare and knows its importance.

First Lt. Pete Cadigan of St. Louis, Mo., is acting officer in charge of the U. S. Army's 245th Psychological Operations Company. He is the son of Bishop George L. Cadigan of the Episcopal diocese of Missouri.

The other two ministers' sons are 2nd Lt. Wylie Williams Jr., son of a Methodist preacher in Charlotte, N. C., and 1st Lt. Harry Goetz, whose father is a Lutheran clergyman in De Pere, Wis. The Pleiku PSYOPS detachment is made up of the five officers and 18 enlisted men — artists, writers, broadcasters, printers or photographers.

The word they are trying to spread is that the Vietnamese government and its American allies are striving to help the peasants while the Communists bring only trouble to the countryside.

"We sometimes go for weeks without seeing any concrete results of our task," Cadigan says, "and you get discouraged. But then some Viet Cong who have been bothered for months by our work comes in and you know you have accomplished something."

The PSYOPS detachment performs jobs ranging from walking with U. S. infantry during minor operations to printing hundreds of thousands of propaganda leaflets and holding frequent sick calls in the villages of the Montagnard hill people.

They fly over Viet Cong hamlets in light planes and broadcast recorded messages in Vietnamese calling on insurgents to surrender and for villagers to deny aid to the Communists.

Sometimes sheer persistence pays off. Once a Viet Cong came in and gave himself up under the program in which guerrillas who surrender and bring in a weapon are given a monetary reward by the Vietnamese government together with other help in resettling and building a new life.

This man told government authorities his Viet Cong sergeant had punished him by making him pick up all propaganda leaflets dropped over their position. Each day as he was about to complete his task of gathering hundreds of the leaflets, another PSYOPS plane would fly over and deposit 2,000 or 3,000 more, ruining his day.

"On this Independence Day pledge to do your share

as an American"

A message from the President about how you can help build peace and preserve prosperity with U.S. Savings Bonds.

On this anniversary of our Nation's birth, most of us are enjoying a holiday from work and the cares of the world.

But even while we celebrate Independence Day there is no real holiday from responsibility. We must go on with the work of building peace, enlarging our prosperity, guarding against inflation and recession.

They are being carried on today by Americans just like you, all across this country and across the world.

I appeal to you today to join these guardians of democracy. I ask you to invest a few dollars each month in the front lines of battle for a stronger America and a safer world.

Put a small part of your prosperity into U.S. Savings Bonds. The $25 Bonds cost $18.75, but they are more than a bargain. They are a wise investment. The new higher interest rate means that the Bonds that you buy and own earn more money. They are easier to acquire and manage than most other investments you can have. You can buy them automatically just by signing up for the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Buy a Bond every month and help to guarantee your own future security. You will also help to guarantee the security of your country.

If only half of the 70 million employed Americans bought just one $25 Savings Bond a month for only one year or even an extra Bond a month they would meet most of the special costs of the struggle that we are making for peace in Vietnam this year.

So I ask you to think about that as you go about freely enjoying this holiday. Think about how much more meaningful your enjoyment would be if you could honestly say, "I have pledged to do my share as an American. I will buy U.S. Savings Bonds on a regular monthly basis."

Collyer Remembers Career Days

By BUD COLLYER
For Cynthia Lowry
Editor's Note — This budy star of CBS "To Tell the Truth" has been host of game shows for so long, most people have forgotten that he has been in broadcasting for more than three decades primarily as an actor — including 14 years as the radio voice of "Superman."

NEW YORK (AP) — Show business has always been exciting, rewarding, stimulating and challenging. It has always been somewhat like the chameleon—subject to instant change.

Thirty years ago it was radio that was lucrative and booming. The greater an actor's skill in creating a mood for a listener with only his voice and a helpful sound-effects engineer, the greater the demand for his services.

I have many happy memories of performing on "Cavalcade of America," "The March of Time," "Gangbusters," "My True Story," "Pretty Kitty Kelly," "The Road of Life," "The Goldbergs," "Superman" and others, with some of the finest actors and actresses the profession will ever know.

Since we were never seen, we could work on an unlimited number of shows merely by changes of voice or accent.

I well remember the quick change another actor and myself had to make one evening on "Cavalcade of America." In those days, magnetic tape had not yet been invented and we always had a second "live" broadcast three hours after the original to accommodate the three-hour differential of the Pacific time zone.

On this particular evening, we had finished the first broadcast at 8:30 p.m. and were due back to repeat at 11:00 p.m. One actor, who shall be nameless, went home after the first show and went to bed forgetfully. The repeat was already started when his absence was noted by a fellow actor.

In a strangled whisper he asked me if I could do a French accent. We never said "No" to anything. It worked so well that not even the director realized our friend was missing.

And then, almost overnight, everything changed. Television's birth made it necessary not only to be heard, but to be seen as well. No longer could we hold scripts in our hands and read lines — now the material had to be memorized or ad-libbed or put on so-called "idiot cards" or electronic prompting devices. Lights were bright and hot and makeup was essential. Careers came and went in a wink and overexposure became a disease devoutly to be avoided.

It was frantic, it was hectic, it was swift and, at times, it was very discouraging. It was a time to discard old methods and tricks and to learn new techniques. There was no chance to cover up for a missing friend. It was a time to realize that performers were now a very real part of most homes and families in America.

It was a far greater responsibility than it ever had been before, but with the responsibility came very real opportunity for growth.

Television is still a comparative infant among the creative arts. Its growth continues to be slow because it has no dotting parents to pay its tuition at fine institutions of learning — and so it has to earn its way with a good deal of trial and a lot of error.

One day it will reach a maturity of which you will be proud. Be patient. Some day I will father happy children of its own and those reruns will be a thing of the past.

ANAHEIM, Calif.—Being a workman at Disneyland might seem a hazardous job. While working on a eagle-sized insect, you never know when a fin-backed edaphosaurus might quit munching on vegetation and give you a try. However, this workman has no worries because all the animals are stars of Disneyland's new "Primeval World." The new attraction will show visitors how the earth looked millions of years ago. (UPI)

US Commitment Questioned

EDITOR'S NOTE—With United States troops engaged around the world, and American aid flowing out—economic, military and food—is the nation spread too thin? That's the question agitating Congress and the people.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the last 20 years most of the non-Communist world has been brought under the shelter of American power. Protection has been given in the form of guns, foreign aid, and defense promises.

Now, important voices are questioning whether this country has over-committed itself; whether the United States has spread itself too thin; whether the United States will have to fight one war after another because of its foreign commitments.

Top administration figures say no, but they have failed to quiet the concern.

The fact is that the U.S. policy of containing communism — and the related policy of trying to build peace and order in the world — offers an open-end promise of help to any country coming under military attack, whether direct as in South Korea in 1950 or indirect as in Viet Nam.

The promise begins with formal defense treaty pledges to 42 allied nations. But it ranges far beyond allies to cover semi-allied countries such as Spain and reaches to non-aligned and sometimes highly critical countries such as India. In the non-Communist world only a few lands in the interior of Asia may be said to lie entirely beyond the reach of the American promise.

In fulfillment of this policy of containment and peace-keeping since the end of World War II, the United States has fought in Korea and Viet Nam. The Korean War is estimated to have cost $18 billion over a three-year period and the Vietnamese war is now costing $1 billion a month.

The United States has spent on its own arms and armed forces, including their deployment in combat over 20 years, a total of $850 billion. These forces are today deployed in 15 countries outside the United States apart from Viet Nam.

The United States has also invested $120 billion in foreign economic and military assistance, much of which was asked by successive U.S. presidents with the argument that it was vital to help block the spread of Communist power in the world. In the United Nations the United States has invested $2.5 billion over the 21 years of its existence, including about $218 million for peacekeeping or policing operations in the Middle East, in the Congo and in Cyprus.

Such enormous expenditures, even by the world's richest and most powerful nation, have recently raised some questions in Congress about whether the United States was spreading itself to thin.

Concern over this possibility seems to have been one reason why the proposal by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield in May — for a drastic cutback of U.S. forces in Germany from the present six divisions to one division — received backing of 44 senators.

But this is not the main question which has troubled senatorial critics of the war in Viet Nam and President Johnson's use of power generally in the world. They are more worried about where the course of combat in Southeast Asia is leading and whether the commitments of the United States to contain communism and combat aggression in the world may lead to new and more dangerous wars.

J. W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations

Committee, has argued that these commitments grow out of foreign aid assistance to weak and underdeveloped countries quite as directly as they grow out of any treaty obligation, either explicit or implied.

"An attitude (toward helping a foreign country) becomes a policy that involves us with the governments of some 83 developing countries," Fulbright told Secretary of State Dean Rusk during a foreign aid hearing April 18.

"I am trying to get at whether aid programs aren't an important element in getting us involved in Viet Nam and other countries."

"I haven't said," Rusk replied, "that we will send out troops if things go bad in a developing country. We have aid programs without any security commitment and not everybody we help is an ally."

Democratic leaders in the Senate for roughly a year have been displaying the greatest discontent with basic U.S. foreign policy that Washington has seen since the fundamental policy lines were laid out at the end of World War II. One reason for this seems to be a conjunction of three actions by President Johnson in a period of six months beginning in late 1964.

In the first action Johnson had U.S. Air Force planes carry Belgian paratroopers on a rescue mission into the Congo, to pull out American and other nationals, chiefly missionaries.

The paratroopers fought rebel forces at Stanleyville and were accused of using a humanitarian operation as a cover to help the Leopoldville government crush a pro-Communist revolution.

In February 1965, Johnson radically escalated the war in Viet Nam by beginning the bombing of North Viet Nam and shortly afterward sending in the vanguard of U.S. combat forces — now totaling more than 260,000 there.

Then within two months came No. 3 — he sent American forces into the Dominican Republic with the argument that the Communists there had captured a revolt against the ruling military junta.

The mere coincidence of these events created a sense of alarm among the Johnson administration critics, notably members of the President's own party, in the Senate.

The critics have been developing their crusade slowly ever since with demands ranging from a reassessment of U.S. commitments abroad to a redirection of a policy toward Communist China and a reorganization of the Atlantic Alliance and its purposes.

Nevertheless, there is no feeling within the Johnson administration on the part of State and Defense Department officials or White House authorities that the President faces irresistible pressures to shake up U.S. for-scale. Slowly, over a period of time, this policy may have to be changed, but when, where and how will be hard questions to answer.

Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, carrying the main battle for the administration, have tried to meet the main brunt of the criticism, as handled by Fulbright, with assurances that the United States is conscious of its own physical and moral limitations.

"The United States," McNamara said, "has no mandate from on high to police the world, and no inclination to do so."

At the same time, in a speech at Montreal May 18 before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, McNamara also argued that the United States is forced by its own security interests to concern itself with trouble wherever it arises.

"Whether Communists are involved or not," he said, "violence anywhere in a taut world transmits sharp signals through the complex ganglia of international relations; and the security of the United States is related to the security and stability of nations half a globe away."

Beginning in 1945 with sponsorship of the United Nations, the United States since the end of World War II has expressed its concern — in Rusk's words — "with the earth as a whole." It developed its commitments for action, through the United Nations, through its own aid programs, through speeches and debates which argued against the loss of any territory to communism, and through an interpretation of its own security interest as requiring it to act in defense of countries with which it is not even allied.

There are two basic alliances going back to the immediate postwar years. The first is the Western Hemisphere "Rio Treaty" which binds this country to 20 Latin-American nations with a flat commitment that an attack against any one of the allies would be considered "an attack against all."

The second, carrying the same kind of hard pledge to go to the defense of an ally, is the U.S. treaty with the 14 NATO countries of Western Europe, the North Atlantic and North America. The diverse membership includes West Germany, Iceland and Canada and stretches to Greece and Turkey. The Atlantic Alliance was signed in 1949 initially to create a shield against Soviet power.

In the rest of the world the United States has a series of treaties with Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Japan, Korea, Thailand, Pakistan and Nationalist China, all of which declare that an attack on any one would be dangerous to the security of other parties to the treaty and that they would act to meet the common danger. The eight-member SEATO treaty which covers Southeast Asia has that kind of commitment.

United States also is committed to some degree by the presence of its troops in foreign countries.

For more than a decade Spain has been an important site of U.S. air and naval bases backing up NATO strategy, though Spain is not a member of NATO.

India is an outstanding example of a non-aligned country covered by largely unspoken U.S. commitments. When Communist China attacked India in late 1962 the United States as well as Britain and the Soviet Union reacted with assistance in arms. When China exploded its first nuclear weapon in October 1964, President Johnson promised India, as well as allied Japan, in a public policy statement that the United States would protect any non-nuclear country against nuclear war or black mail by China.

Truman's action in June was not foreshadowed by his secretary of state's policy definition in January. It was based morally and legally on the argument that the United States had commitments under the U.N. Charter and its own association with South Korea, to defend that country. The strategic consideration which played a decisive part was that Communist conquest of South Korea would endanger Japan.

In the 1950s when President Dwight D. Eisenhower considered newly independent African countries threatened by Communist takeover, he chose, in the case of the Congo, to ask the United Nations to intervene with force to restore and maintain order.

The United Nations did so, avoiding the use of big-power troops. If the United Nations had refused to act, many well-informed authorities believe Eisenhower would have decided on U.S. unilateral or allied intervention — not because of any treaty commitment or aid commitment but because the United States for its own long-range security could not afford to see the African countries fall under communist control.

Ichord Sees War Step-Up Is Desirable

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Rep. Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., says most of the constituents he has heard from favor stepping up the war in Viet Nam and winning it as soon as possible.

Ichord has been polling the people of this big 24-county 8th district of south central Missouri and now feels that the war will be less of an issue in the fall campaign than some of the administration's domestic policies.

He is a member of the House Armed Services Committee and reports a majority of that group has favored bombing North Viet Nam supply bases in Hanoi and Haiphong for the last year.

Ichord is home during the congressional recess, "mending my fences," as he puts it. He has only nominal primary opposition from William David Hardis of Waynesville.

Around the state capital, the most political interest continues to be expressed in some of the state senatorial contests — especially the 20th of south central Missouri which stretches from Franklin County on the northeast to Texas County on the southwest.

There a bitter Democratic primary fight has developed between former Sen. and Rep. Gene Sally and Rep. Mel Carnahan, both of Rolla. Carnahan is now majority floor leader in the Missouri House.

Few politicians are willing to make any bets on this one. The winner will oppose Sen. Don Owens, R-Gerald, who has no primary opposition.

Ichord, who is from Texas County, said he has not taken any soundings on the progress of the race and had no basis for an opinion.

Another contest attracting attention is in the new 18th of northeastern Missouri where two state representatives are fighting it out — Rep. George Pace of Hannibal and Rep. Richard Southern of Monroe City.

Third man seeking the Democratic nomination is James E. Riney, Marion County assessor.

Two incumbent Republican senators are locked in another interesting battle in the 12th district of northwestern Missouri—Sen. James P. Kelly of Trenton and Sen. Ronald L. Somerville of Chillicothe.

They were thrown into the same district by last year's reapportionment.

Kelly, who is president of Kemper Military School at Boonville, has been in the Senate since 1954. He formerly was Republican state chairman.

Somerville, a lawyer, was elected only last year to succeed Sen. Jack C. Jones, D-Carrollton, who resigned to become a federal bankruptcy commissioner.

Another Republican battle has developed in the 30th District of Greene County, where Sen. Jack Curtis of Springfield is being challenged by Rep. Monty Harlow of Springfield.

Curtis has been in the Senate since 1954, Harlow in the House since 1958.

In the new 29th District of west central Missouri three Democrats are vying for the nomination in a hot campaign.

They are Ralph H. Duggins, former state insurance superintendent, Frank W. McGraw, who ran once before and came close to winning, and R. L. Ehrhardt, all of Marshall.

There the outcome might hinge on which man can carry Pettis County, largest in the six-county district.

Not all the talk around the capital city is political.

The funniest story for many a day came from a state employee who would rather not be quoted by name.

He said a central Missouri police officer got into financial trouble and pawned his police pistol with him for $22.

Then the officer bought a cheap cap pistol and carried it around in his holster for three weeks until he could scrape up enough money to redeem his official gun.

Ravaged by Moths

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — An estimated total of 100,000 or more acres of woodland in Northern New Jersey has been ravaged by moths this year, the State Agriculture Department reported.

An official said there was no explanation of the increased moth damage but added that they were known to build up in cycles.

Modify Air Contract

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The U.S. Army Aviation Materiel Command has increased by more than $16 million an aircraft - engine contract with AVCO of Stratford, Conn.

The modified contract, for UH1 helicopter engines, now provides for 459 engines at a cost of $22,107,483.

American University In Beirut Has Its Anniversary

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A century ago, a Protestant missionary from New England gathered 16 students in a rented five-room house, and beneath the suspicious eyes of the Turkish Empire, started an American college in the Arab world.

The house has grown to a 75-acre campus, the student enrollment has swollen from 16 to 3,200, and the American University of Beirut is celebrating its 100th anniversary as a most respected seat of learning in the Middle East.

In an area where the United States is none too popular, the American University exerts the influence of a giant magnet, attracting students and talent from the Arab world and beyond. It is assailed only rarely as an obtrusive American presence — most recently with accusations by Arab nationalist students that the campus was a base for CIA operations.

Almost 400 of its faculty of 628 are Arabs, and six of seven Arab ambassadors to the United Nations are graduates. The school's international stature was exhibited at the 1945 San Francisco conference that founded the United Nations. Nineteen of the participants were from the Beirut university — more than from any other single educational institution. The university was called the Syrian Protestant College until 1920. Today it is neither Protestant nor Syrian. It is chartered in the State of New York, and its students come from 59 countries and 21 religions.

"The success of the A.U.B. comes from the affinity of the Arab way of thinking for the free type of learning we offer," says the university's Dr. Burton Thurston. "Also, we do not alienate Arab students from their own culture despite our western approach, and Arab leaders always have appreciated this."

"This year we have room for only 250 new students, but we have 2,000 applications."

Many of the Arab world's prominent citizens studied at the A.U.B. — statesmen, engineers, businessmen, guerrilla leaders in Yemen's civil war — and an A.U.B. project may affect the life of a city dweller in Pakistan, a villager in Africa or a nomad tribesman in the desert.

The university hospital has long been a major medical center, and $24 million in U. S. aid funds now are building the biggest and most modern hospital and medical school in the Middle East for the A.U.B.

The university begins its centennial year with commencement exercises Monday, and in a ceremony next Dec. 3 it will re-enact the day 100 years ago when The Rev. Mr. Bliss, a one-

Kipper is really the proper name for a male salmon when he is approaching the breeding season. He then develops a sharp, hard beak known as the "kip." The word kipper is derived from this from the practice of curing the kip for food by splitting, cleaning, salting and smoking it. The term is now used for other fish, especially herring.

time farm boy and tannery apprentice from Vermont, founded the original college with funds he raised in the United States and Britain.

When The Rev. Mr. Bliss bought the present campus, it was a bleak sandy clearing reached by a mule track. Now it is a rolling, terraced garden sloping to the Mediterranean, with 70 buildings and its own swimming beach. The mule track is a bustling main street, named Rue Bliss after the founder, and a favorite students' hangout is Uncle Sam's Snack Bar.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
MANILA (AP) — Filipinos chorused an indignant no-no to the yeah-yeah boys from Liverpool today after the Beatles missed a date with the glamorous First Lady of the Philippines.

"Beatles Snub First Family" and "Mopheads Slept While Imelda Waited" said the headlines in Manila newspapers. The quartet failed to make an appearance before Imelda Marcos, wife of President Ferdinand Marcos, their three youngsters and 300 other children of high government officials.

After waiting more than an hour in a chandelied hall of the Presidential Palace, Mrs. Marcos declared: "As much as I would like to meet them I could not wait this long. My children have all the time in the world but I don't."

The Beatles' manager, Brian Epstein, denied his charges ever got an invitation for a command appearance, so there wouldn't be an apology to the First Lady.

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — The National Union of South African Students congress has condemned the "arbitrary banning" of their president, Ian Robertson.

Student delegates called on Justice Minister Balthazar Vorster, who clamped the five-year ban on Robertson May 11 under the country's suppression of communism laws, to charge or release him.

Another resolution called on Vorster to consider Robertson innocent until proved guilty.

Robertson, 21, was prevented from being host to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., on his recent tour of South Africa. He is confined to Durban district, must report to the police regularly, and may not be quoted or attend gatherings or enter the grounds of an educational institution.

LONDON (AP) — Candidates for the Church of England priesthood are down by 40 percent and the Church Assembly meets today to decide what should be done about it.

A report from the Advisory Council for the Church's Ministry offered four reasons for the dropoff.

1. Current intellectual uncertainty and secularism.
2. Greater emphasis on the importance of the lay ministry.
3. Certain anachronistic features of church life.
4. Reluctance of the young to make a life-long commitment.

LONDON (AP) — "The boss of one of London's biggest department stores said today he has forbidden his girl clerks to wear thigh-high skirts."

"They're not businesslike," said Dennis Turner, managing director of Peter Jones Ltd.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Pamela Mason wondered what she'd have if she bought one each of every item advertised on one TV channel during one day. Answer: a cluttered front lawn and a dent in your bankbook. The ex-wife of actor James Mason sits amid cleaners, detergents and other items she purchased after 18 non-stop hours before her TV set. It was just a stunt but she wonders about a bigger and better project now that she owns not one but five TV sets and a panel van to cart home her purchases. (UPI)

William Leon Crow, 16, Rocky Comfort, Mo., was killed Saturday night when his motorcycle collided with a station wagon on Missouri 76 near Rocky Comfort.

LeRoy Anderson, 28, Florissant, was struck by a car and killed Saturday in Hazelwood, a St. Louis suburb.

Mrs. Beulah Pruitt, 55, High Gate, Mo., was killed Saturday in a crash on M-28, six miles south of Belle. She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, 60-year-old Wilbur Lee Pruitt.

The patrol said the accident occurred as Pruitt made a left turn in front of a car driven by John Hilton, 22, of Belle. Pruitt was treated for bruises and abrasions.

Lawrence R. Chapman, 20, Pierce City, was killed Friday night when his car went out of control while being pursued by the highway patrol on a country road southwest of Monett.

Trooper Larry Cooper said he gave chase at speeds up to 100 miles an hour. He said the car turned off U.S. 60 onto the road, topped a hill, skidded 154 feet going into a curve, sailed 41 feet to hit a tree trunk five feet off the ground, and bounded into another tree before coming to a stop.

At least eight traffic deaths have been reported in Kansas.

preme Court Justice John Marshall in 1835.

Pennsylvania eventually moved its capital to Harrisburg and the city of Philadelphia, which still owns the bell, decided to scrap it. But the foundry man, who had the contract to cast a new bell, refused to cart it away.

It fell into disuse and was almost forgotten, hanging in the old steeple.

In 1846 some workers drilled out the crack, hoping to restore its tone. But the bell by now, was so brittle, it could not be rung.

Because of the quotation, by the mid-19th century the bell had become a symbol of liberty.

It was lowered from the steeple and exhibited in the hall. It then was taken to New Orleans in 1885, Chicago in 1893, Atlanta in 1895, Charleston in 1902, Boston in 1903 and San Francisco in 1915 for exhibits and fairs. The last time the bell left Independence Hall was in 1917 when it was paraded through city streets in a Liberty Bond drive.

week. The Peking statement said the attacks had brought the war to "a new and still graver stage" but did not specify what if any new aid the Chinese would provide.

Guam-based B52s gave the Communists a July Fourth salute in South Viet Nam by saturating for the second successive day a Viet Cong concentration near Da Nang and another along the Cambodian Border northwest of Saigon.

Ground fighting in South Viet Nam dwindled to small patrol actions today after several flareups over the weekend.

The largest of these was an engagement between about 200 men of the U. S. 25th Infantry Division and an entrenched Communist force estimated at two companies, about 350 men.

The action took place seven miles south of the Duc Co Special Forces camp in the central highlands and five miles from the Cambodian frontier.

The Viet Cong fired mortars and small arms and broke off the engagement after the Americans unlimbered a heavy artillery barrage.

A U. S. spokesman said the Communists pulled westward toward Cambodia. Pursing U. S. troops again made contact late in the day and called in air strikes. Contact was broken after two and a half hours. The spokesman said that search operations today failed to find the Communist force. The spokesman said U. S. troops suffered moderate casualties, many apparently in the first mortar attack.

An estimated company of about 150 Viet Cong attacked the Trai Bi Special Forces camp with mortar, automatic weapons and small-arms fire Sunday night. It is also near the Cambodian border 65 miles northeast of Saigon.

The Green Beret forces counterattacked, supported by artillery, and the engagement broke off after an hour and a half. A U. S. spokesman said there were no allied casualties and the enemy casualties were not known.

In air action over South Viet Nam Sunday, American pilots flew 414 sorties, possibly killing 64 Viet Cong, destroyed or damaging 420 enemy huts and fortifications, and sinking four sampans, the spokesman said. Vietnamese pilots flew 187 sorties.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U. S. forces in Viet Nam, spent the Fourth of July touring frontline units in the northern provinces and the central highlands. He was accompanied by Capt. William S. Carpenter, the 28-year-old former West Point football hero who became the hero of the Kontum Plateau fighting last month by calling an air strike on himself and his men to save them from being overwhelmed by North Vietnamese regulars. He will become an aide to Westmoreland next Thursday.

Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's government released several Buddhist agitators arrested in the recent Buddhist-fueled rioting in Saigon against the regime. The move represented a conciliatory gesture by the government after the Buddhist hierarchy announced a two-week truce in the political struggle against the ruling generals which the militant Buddhists had all but lost anyway. A statement issued by a council of church fathers Sunday asked the regime to "show good will toward our religion" during the truce.

Johnson was told by the State Department there was nothing really new in a Communist Chinese statement Sunday that the stepped-up bombing "now had freed us from any bounds of restriction" in aiding North Viet Nam.

At the conclusion of the two weeks, leading monks of the Unified Buddhist Church, the politically active branch of South Vietnamese Buddhism, will meet to make a new assessment of relations with the government, the statement said.

Disorders, Vandalism Continuing

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Disorder and vandalism continued on Omaha's heavily Negro Near North Side early today.

A teen-ager was shot by an off-duty policeman, and more than 50 persons, most of them tennagers, were arrested.

Quiet had been restored by daybreak but in Lincoln, Lt. Gov. Philip C. Sorensen said all steps were being taken to insure that state manpower would be available in Omaha if there is more trouble.

Sorensen, acting in the absence of Gov. Frank Morrison, said state troopers and National Guardsmen were available if Omaha Mayor A. V. Sorensen asked for them.

A fireworks disturbance triggered a riot in the same area early Sunday where the bulk of Omaha's Negro population lives. Police Chief C. Harold Ostler blamed the trouble on a "small group of rowdies" and said it had "no racial significance."

But Ostler cancelled all leaves for the holiday weekend and put his full force to work on 12-hour shifts.

A band of Negro youths moved along 24th street, the Near North Side's main business artery, early today after a dance. They broke windows in several business establishments defying the beefed-up police details.

Officers said a 15-year-old was shot by an off-duty policeman during a break in. The youth was treated for a leg wound and released.

crease aid to Hanoi, it made no specific commitments and carefully refrained from any specific promises.

It said: "China has consistently and unreservedly done its utmost to support and aid Viet Nam politically, morally and materially and in other fields. The development by U.S. imperialism of its war of aggression to a new and still graver stage has now further freed us from any bounds or restrictions in rendering such support and aid."

"In accordance with the interests and demands of the Vietnamese people, we will at any time take such actions as we deem necessary."

Although the statement referred to previous Peking declarations that included threats to send "volunteers" to fight in Viet Nam, there was only indirect mention of such forces this time.

The subject of Red China came up in talks between Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek in Taipei. On his arrival in Formosa Sunday, Rusk indicated he thought the Communist Chinese were too preoccupied with domestic pressures to get too seriously involved in foreign adventures.

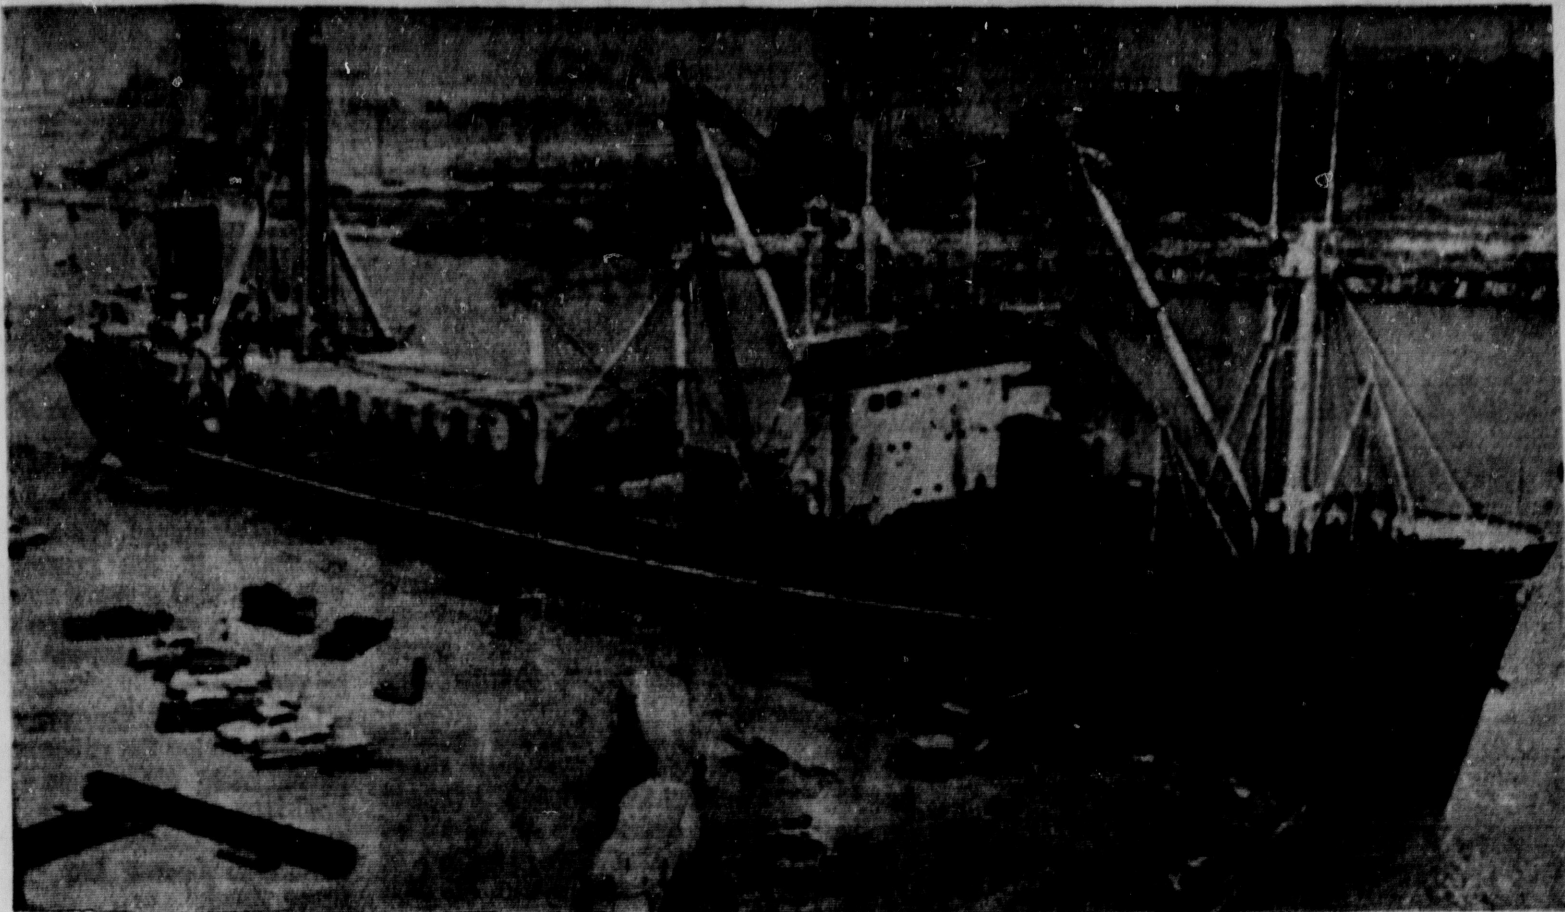

"Obviously, there are some tensions and some strain and some rivalry for leadership going on on the mainland," Rusk told newsmen. "We are watching it with great interest."

Rusk reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to defend Formosa and to oppose any proposal to deprive the Nationalists of their place in the United Nations and seat the Communists instead.

Satellites Continue Work

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Around the earth, above and around the moon, in the lonely stillness of space, unmanned satellites are probing the secrets of the universe.

They don't get the headlines that manned space flights do, but the automatic robots are yielding rich dividends in weather, communications, navigation and reconnaissance data. They are revolutionizing science's view of the universe and helping to make man's life on earth a better one.

Only six years ago, the United States and the Soviet Union were happy if they could throw a tiny satellite into any kind of an orbit with a simple Geiger counter aboard.

Now, both nations are launching satellites by the bundle and shifting them all over the skies to desired locations. Some have traveled with pinpoint accuracy to Mars, Venus and the moon — and have relayed pictures over millions of miles of space. Some have had over 400,000 parts, all of which operated flawlessly for months in the hostile new environment.

The Soviet Union launched the first two Sputniks in 1957, but during the next four years was able to place only 10 satellites in orbit.

The U.S. placed five satellites in orbit in 1958 and 10 in 1960 — but recorded more failures than successes.

The figures for 1965 are astounding, considering the relative youth of the space age. The United States last year sent 94 satellites into orbit around the earth and fired two to the moon and one into orbit about the sun. The Russians placed 66 in earth orbit and rocketed two to Venus, one of them striking the planet.

To date, the United States has sent more than 370 successful unmanned craft into space and the Soviet Union more than 170. In addition, the United States has launched 13 manned ships with a total of 20 astronauts, compared to eight ships and 11 Russian cosmonauts.

The majority of these unmanned satellites have been military ones — more than 200 by the United States and more than 90 by the Russians, according to U.S. experts.

America's military satellites are launched in secrecy from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. Most are involved in photo reconnaissance of the Soviet Union, Red China and other areas of the globe. Others are used for navigation, mapping, policing the limited nuclear test-ban treaty and for experimenting with such things as satellite observation and inspection. Film and other gear usually is returned to earth for recovery after a week or so in space, accounting for the high launching rate.

The Soviet Union also is believed to be using unmanned satellites for extensive reconnaissance work. American officials believe the Cosmos satellites launched from a base at Tyuratam are military in nature because their orbits take them each day over the continental United States and major portions of Canada, Alaska and Europe. They usually stay up about eight days and then are returned to earth.

Other Cosmos satellites are launched from a base at Kapustin Yar. They do not cover as wide an area of the globe and are believed to be what the Russians claim for all of the Cosmos series: scientific satellites.

The early Sputniks and American Explorers and Vanguarders were sent up for scientific research. With more sophisticated equipment, the smaller American satellites produced the richer harvest.

They discovered and defined the potentially dangerous Van Allen radiation belt which encircles the globe; answered many questions about the communications-influencing ionosphere; located a great solar wind blowing radiation clouds through planetary space; described the earth as not round, but pear-shaped; detected layers of helium and hydrogen and bands of cosmic dust beyond our atmosphere, and proved it was safe for man to venture away from his planet.

As rockets became larger and more reliable, heavier satellites — weighing up to 22,000 pounds for the United States and 27,000 pounds for the Russians — were sent into space.

The series of U.S. geophysical and solar observatories — large payloads packed with instruments — have explored the sun and earth's atmosphere in great detail. A big disappointment was the failure in April of the first orbiting astronomical observatory, a $500-million package which was intended to give man his initial clear look at the stars and perhaps uncover clues to the origin of the universe. More and larger observatories are on tap.

Complex payloads have been launched on lunar and planetary missions — but not without difficulty. Twelve moon shots failed before the United States finally succeeded with three straight Ranger picture-taking efforts in 1964 and 1965 and the recent soft-landing of Surveyor 1.

America has sent two spacecraft to Mars and two to Venus, with one of each succeeding. The Soviet Union has succeeded on four of 14 moon shots, but has failed on nine of 10 Venus shots and on all seven of its Mars attempts.

The U.S. Mariner 2 sailed to within 21,648 miles of Venus in 1962 and relayed a wealth of data, including the fact that the surface temperature is about 800 degrees but that the reading dips to 30 to 70 degrees below zero on the cloud-top of the perpetually shrouded planet.

Mariner 4 passed within 5,600 miles of Mars last year and sent back 21 pictures of the surface. Analysis of radio data showed the red planet to be more moon-like than earth-like and indicated that Mars has no radiation belt and practically no magnetic field.

The Ranger moon pictures, plus the closeups obtained by the landers, the Soviet Luna 9 and America's Surveyor 1, apparently show that man can land safely on the lunar surface. Luna 10, the world's first moon orbiter, provided information on conditions in the vicinity of the moon.

Surveyor 1 was the first of an all-out assault that the United States plans on the moon to pave the way for manned lunar landings. During a 2½-year period 16 soft-landings and lunar orbiting shots are slated. But budget problems have curtailed the planetary program and in the next seven years only three Mars and one Venus launching are planned. In 1973, a huge Project Voyager craft is to soft-land on Mars.

Russian interest in the moon and planets has been keen and they are expected to pursue these goals. Secrecy shrouds their plans.

Computers for Traffic Jams

Motorists in Toronto, Canada, are enjoying a preview of a system which will eventually come to all big cities.

Conscious that the economic loss from traffic tie-ups and accidents was costing the metropolitan area some $111 million annually, and realizing that there was one vehicle for every 20 feet of paved road in the city with the ratio shrinking, Toronto decided to do something about it.

It brought in a Univac 1107 electronic computer to control traffic. This fast-acting brain has the capacity to examine and analyze as many as 1,000 intersections in one second. In the one-thousandth of a second which it devotes to each intersection, the computer:

- Reads the volume and speed of traffic as reported by 2,000 detection devices scattered along the streets.
- Calculates the density of traffic flow by dividing the number of vehicles by the time to detect them.
- Reads the traffic signal and notes how long it has been red or green.

• Computes the correct length of time the signal should remain green in a certain direction.

• Compares this computed time with the time the signal has already been green. If the two items are equal, it sends a signal to change the light. If the actual "green" time is less than the computed "green" time, it goes on to examine the next intersection, returning to this one a second later.

• Finally, when the computer orders a signal change, it checks to see if the change actually takes place. If not, it repeats the order. If the light still doesn't change, the computer notifies a human operator and turns the problem over to him.

Because of the computer, says one writer, it is as if Toronto had added an extra lane to each of the city's four-lane streets without turning a shovel of dirt.

We the Women

Might Be Practical

By Ruth Millett
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The latest thing in women's dresses (not yet available except by direct mail order) is a shift made of disposable paper meant to be worn and then thrown away.

Well, women finally went for the sack when the designers quit calling it that and started calling it a shift. But something tells me they aren't going to go overboard for a PAPER sack, no matter what it's called.

Not that it wouldn't be convenient to have throw-away dresses that cost no more than sending an ordinary dress to the dry cleaners.

But, for women, clothes are more than a cover-up. They are also a means of self-expression and a status symbol.

The woman who likes clothes may complain about what a chore shopping for them is. But actually she gets a great deal of satisfaction out of co-ordinating a wardrobe and deciding how to work last year's leftovers into this year's purchases.

For women to whom clothes are a status symbol, labels are the big thing. They don't feel well-dressed unless the labels inside their clothes are impressive ones. And the more they pay for a dress, the happier they are wearing it, for they know that other women can't have it.

So all most women would get out of an inexpensive little throw-away shift would be a cover-up. And that's just not enough for a woman.

She could, conceivably, pick up those paper sacks at the super market — and what fun would that be?

No, for all they might deny it — women enjoy making a big thing out of putting a wardrobe together and keeping it up to the minute. The time they spend on this — and the money — they consider to be well-spent.

Dressing in paper sacks would be just too easy and uncomplicated.

Mississippi River
'Needs Promotion'

One of Missouri's biggest tourist attractions — the Mississippi River — is not receiving the beautification and promotion it needs and deserves, Governor Warren Hearnes' press secretary, Will Davis, charged last week.

Davis is a Hearnes appointment to the Mississippi River Parkway Commission, a formal group composed of 10 states and the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario. Its purpose is to promote the attractions and natural beauty of the Mississippi River.

"The commission simply has been mismanaged. It's a feeling of many of the commission members that a more vigorous plan of promotion should be launched if our purpose is to be realized."

Last February, Davis sent out a feeler asking the governors of participating states and prime ministers of the two provinces about the possibility of a conference to discuss the "Great River Road."

The Great River Road Association — a private group which grew out of the older Commission — wants a scenic and easily-traveled road on each side of the Mississippi River to attract more tourists.

The idea of a governors' conference to discuss the Mississippi has met with "good response," Davis says. "The big problem is finding a date that fits the packed schedules of the respective governors."

Davis expects the governors' conference around the first of the year if all the schedules can be worked out.

Missouri presently contributes $3,000 annually to the Commission. "This is now dissipated and misused," Davis said.

However, Davis called the mighty river "a travel promotion dream." That is why he is trying to get the governors' conference organized to discuss highway beautification, the top priority item in attracting tourists to the river.

Another big help will be the so-called "Lady Bird" bill, the federal highway beautification bill. "But we still need the governors' initiative to get the ball rolling," Davis said.

U. S. Highway 61 in Missouri winds its way along the Missouri from the Iowa line to the Bootheel. This highway would be the major beneficiary of any beautification on the Mississippi River.

'Big Muddy.' Too

The 'Big Muddy' also is getting its share of attention from Governor Hearnes.

Hearnes Tuesday concurred in the plan for the creation of a Missouri River Basin Commission. The Governor in a letter to Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall said he would ask the 1967 legislature to approve the state's participation in the Commission.

Cremation, widely practiced in the ancient world, has remained common throughout the eastern world and is becoming increasingly acceptable in the western world. In Great Britain, cremation represents about one-third of the total body disposals, which is about the same percentage for Europe and the Scandinavian countries. This is much more than the number of cremations in the United States, where there are about 300,000 each year.

Looking Backward

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Confidential Sources. — Should newspaper reporters be permitted to protect their confidential sources? The question arises in the case of Annette Buchanan, journalist at the University of Oregon, who has refused to identify seven students she interviewed for a story about the use of marijuana.

Having refused to obey a court order to reveal her sources, she must now stand trial for contempt of court. The state maintains that her refusal to testify obstructed the administration of justice.

While there is a general duty of citizens to testify when subpoenaed, common law gives to attorneys and clergymen, if questioned in court as to confidential communications, the privilege to remain silent. By statute this privilege has frequently been extended to physicians, psychiatrists, and, in 12 states, to reporters.

In the other American states and in Britain the right of newsmen to protect their sources is far from established. In recent years both American and British journalists who have refused to reveal confidential sources have been held in contempt of court and meted out jail sentences.

As so often happens, these cases suggest a conflict between two basic rights — freedom of the press and the fair administration of justice. The public has a major stake in both.

It is in the public interest for the press to be able to gather and disseminate news about crime, corruption, social evils, and so on. Indeed, its continued ability to do so is itself a considerable aid to the fair administration of justice — to the apprehension and conviction of criminals and corrupt officeholders. For press exposure paves the way for subsequent investigation and prosecution.

The press, then, performs a watchdog function through its investigative reporting. If its sources of sensitive information are not to dry up, it has to be able to protect them. Civil servants, for example, may be

Computers For Cows

"You can't just be a plain old cow keeper anymore and make a living," said farmer Wicks in Up State New York. "You have to be a breeder and a dairy man." Mr. Wicks wants to know which of his 65 milk cows is eating up more money than it makes so he turns to a computer to find out.

About 10,000 farmers are now benefitting from the same technological revolution that can put computers and data processing machinery to work in the offices of government and business.

Mr. Wicks does not have a computer on his farm. It is at Cornell University and is used by other farmers of the Dairy Herds Improvement Cooperative, Inc. The computer service costs them about $33 per month depending on the number of cows. A milk tester visits the farms once a month to obtain data for the computers which produces the monthly reports.

A recent IBM symposium revealed the fact that farmers cooperatives are beginning to go beyond record keeping and analysis of costs and production to enter into more complex linear programming.

willing to tell the press of corruption in government on the condition that their communication be kept strictly confidential. After all, they sometimes risk, their very careers in unearthing such information.

In our view, both freedom of the press and the fair administration of justice will be furthered by permitting journalists to protect their sources in accord with their moral conviction and responsibility.

Washington Viewpoint

Hero's Mantle Eludes the President

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — One year ago two respected Washington observers broke into print almost simultaneously with sweeping summaries of the criticisms then being heaped on President Johnson.

They set the whole town talking. That same week, Johnson named his top aide, Bill D. Moyers, as press secretary in what was widely taken as a move to alter his image.

Yet today matters seem only to be worse. Less than a majority of the people, the polls say, approve either his general performance or his conduct of the war in Viet Nam. Few Democratic figures announce proudly they are wearing the LBJ brand. The assaults upon the President are so vigorous and so constant that it is hard now to recall 1965 and the avalanche of his Great Society triumphs.

His combat with the press — and that is what it is — is relieved only by temporary truces called press conferences, which seem merely to feed a mutual estrangement. Reporters who necessarily accompany him to Texas feel as isolated as if they were in Saigon.

When Harry Truman fell to low estate, sympathy stirred in many hearts. Lyndon Johnson gets almost none, perhaps partly because he does not look as if he needed it. Like any president, he labors hard for his niche in history. There may be times nowadays when, under steady hammering, he imagines that history may prove his only durable friend.

With a national electorate strongly Democratic, it is conceivable Johnson might be re-elected in 1968 by millions who accept him not only without affection but with diminishing admiration as well.

There is a danger in the prospect that the President and the nation may be found barely tolerating one another.

For all his vaunted links to men of valued judgment beyond the White House gates, he lives today in a kind of unsplendid isolation. A man acknowledged to have prodigious talents, great energies, an incalculable dedication to work, Johnson must be baffled to see these things dismissed almost as of no account.

In 1966 he presides over a nation which, abroad, is fighting its most puzzling war and which, at home, seethes with the unprecedented social ferment of the Negro revolution. He keeps his footing.

Man of action and accomplishment though he is, the President nevertheless searches in vain for the garments of the hero. Other names—Roosevelt, Eisenhower, Kennedy—ring in his ears. There are no great Johnson cohorts.

Even the abilities for which he is celebrated have, in the end, hurt him. In the beginning much was said of his appreciation of the uses of power. Now, power and Johnson are often spoken of as an unhappy coalition.

Many Americans, to judge from their recorded comment, miss in Lyndon Johnson the leaven of idealism which makes the stern uses of power understandable and endurable. Too frequently, they identify him only with its meaner applications.

On rare days, the President has discovered and voiced the eloquence of the country's ideals. His June, 1965, address on Negro rights at Howard University was such a day. For a magic moment or two, the same incandescence was felt in his words to Negroes meeting in conference on those rights a year later. But the times are few.

If they were more common, less surely would be heard of the President's personal shortcomings. Talk of them would be burned away in the fires of inspiring leadership.

Americans, questioned often, make plain they want that fire of spirit, not just cold accomplishment.

President Johnson has years yet in which to find the fire's unfailing source. If he does not, dreams of history's hoped-for accolade may supply his only comfort.

Pig Crop Report June 1, 1966

The estimated number of pigs saved in Missouri this spring is 3,324,000 head compared with 2,994,000 saved in the spring of 1965. The 11 percent increase from last year was due to a larger number of sows farrowing and a slightly larger number of pigs saved per litter during the December-May period. The average litter size was 7.23 compared with 7.18 in the spring of 1965.

Intentions for this fall indicate 463,000 sows to farrow, 10 percent more than the 421,000 head farrowing in 1965.

Refund of Federal Tax On Gasoline

Because of a change in the tax laws, you will not be mailed Form 2240, Claim for Refund of Federal Tax on Gasoline Used on a Farm.

The law now provides that for taxable years beginning after June 30, 1965, the Federal tax paid on gasoline should be claimed as a credit on Federal income tax returns. Instructions for claiming the credit will be included in the income tax return forms for 1966.

Tree Stump Removal

With the high toll of trees dead from Dutch Elm Disease and other causes, homeowners are asking for a practical way to remove stumps from their lawn. The most efficient method of removing stumps from a lawn involves the use of a machine which is commonly called a stump gouger. This machine has rotating cutting teeth which will reduce stumps to chips to a point several inches below the ground level.

Many of the tree service companies in Sedalia now have these machines.

Another means of removing these elm stumps is by boring holes in the stump and filling these holes with a chemical. In a few weeks the stump will burn out when set fire. This chemical is available in Sedalia.

Pasture Renovation

Livestock men with poor pastures are wondering when they should start renovating their pastures. They also want to know what should be done along the line of fertilization.

Pasture renovation should be completed around the middle of September or earlier. This includes the new seeding. The starting time should be far enough ahead to allow for everything to be done right so the whole job will be successful. In many cases this means starting pretty soon.

First test the soil. Secondly use lime and fertilizer based upon the soil test. Apply the treatment soon before preparing the seed bed, so the treatment is worked into the soil as deeply as possible. Finally use a starter fertilizer at seeding time.

Harvesting Grass Seed

Missouri farmers usually harvest from 20 to 30 million lbs. of grass seed from timothy, tall fescue, reedtop, orchard grass and bromegrass each year. The grass seed harvest not only adds several million dollars to farm income, but is highly important in supplying the means by which we seed and reseed the stands of grass that contribute so much to Missouri agriculture.

Much of the state has had enough rain this spring that grass has grown well after a late start. So it looks like there will be a lot of farmers with fields from which they will be interested in saving as much seed as possible and getting it marketed in good condition. Doing these two things presents some problems. First, all these grasses except bromegrass shatter seed badly if permitted to fully ripen and dry in the field. Second, if harvested at a high moisture content, the seed may heat and damage germination. So the method and date of harvesting and handling of the seed between harvesting and marketing are vital steps in successful seed production.

The ideal way to harvest all of these grasses except bromegrass is to use a windrower and a pick-up attachment on the combine. In this way the seed can be harvested and windrowed before the seed shatters. As soon as dry, the windrows can be picked up and combined and the seed safely stored. However, relatively few windrowers are available, so most Missouri seed is combined direct from the field.

If a windrower is used, the seed should be cut when the straw in the head turns a yellow straw color. This is too early for direct combining, and it is best to wait until the ripest seeds begin to shatter. Unfortunately, a hail or heavy windstorm may come at this time, so much of the seed can shatter and be lost. For this reason, the combine should be started without delay when the combine stage is reached.

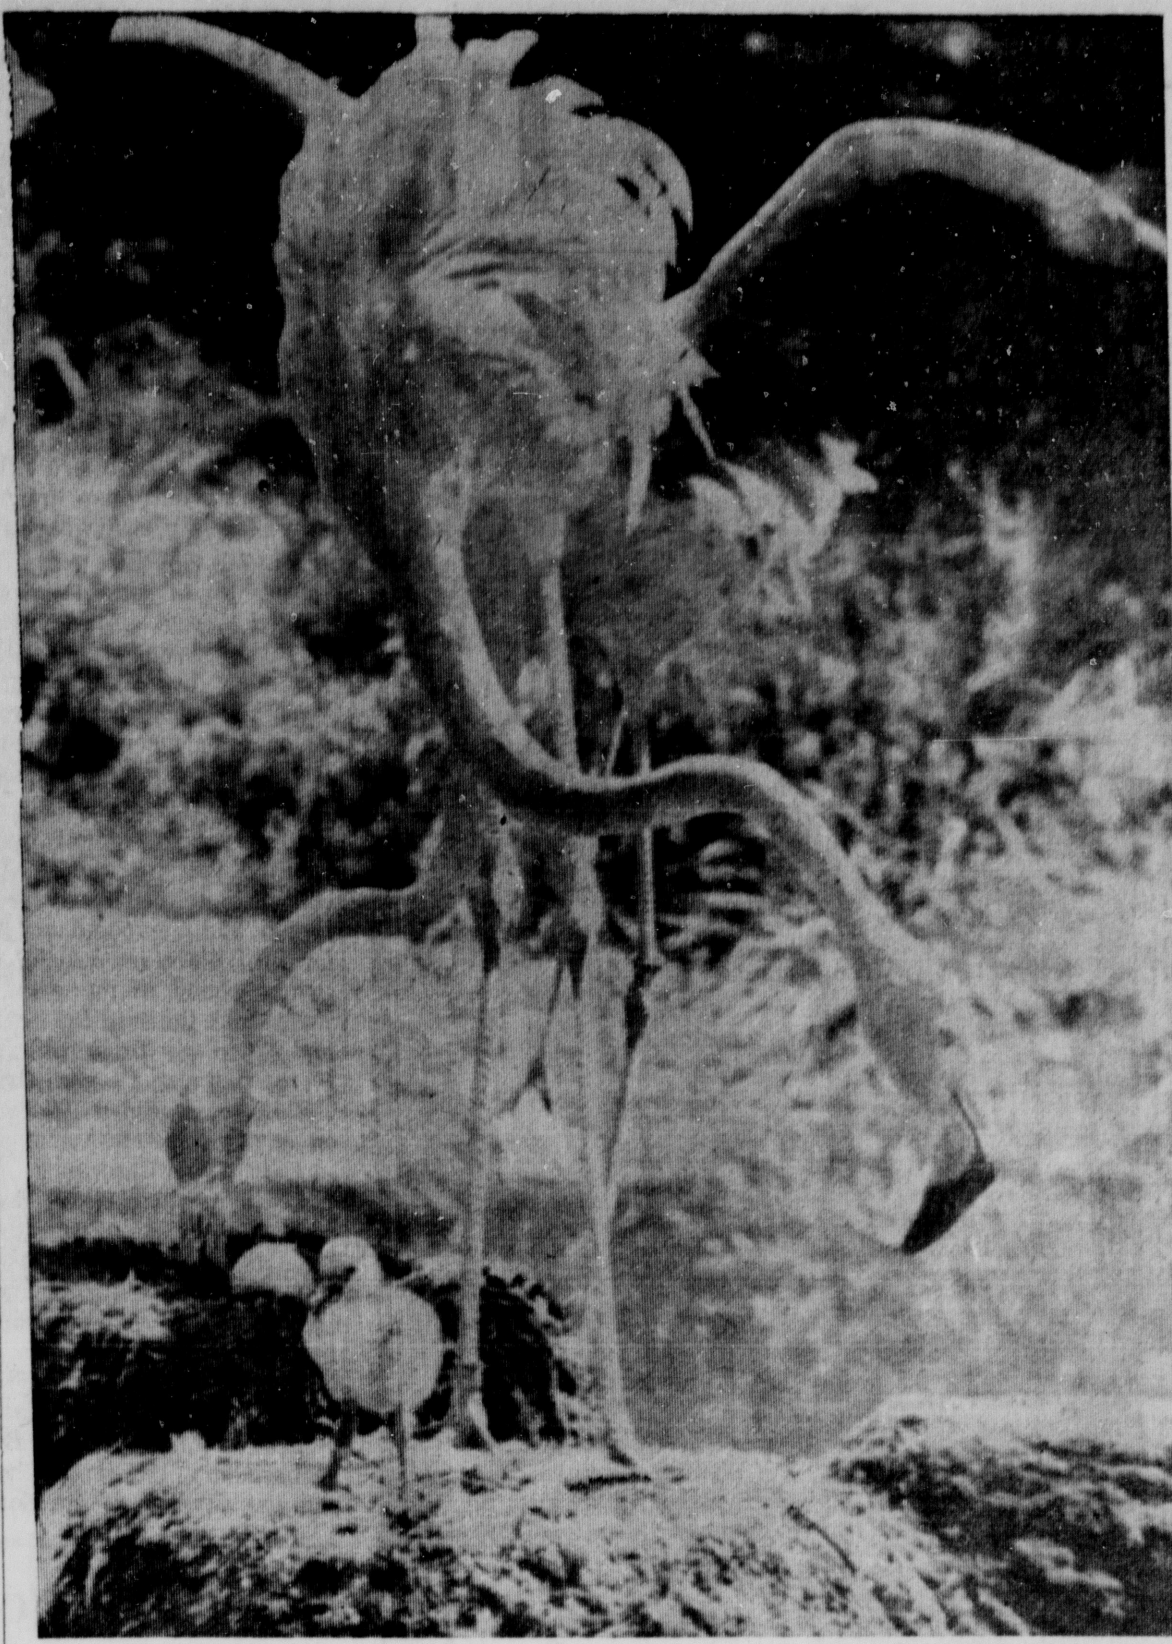

Because of moisture problems, it will be well for those who combine to check with their seed dealer ahead of time. He may have drying facilities and can take their seed before it is dry enough to store. If they have drying facilities of their own, they could well check with their dealer on procedures to follow in drying. Seed drying is different than drying grain for feed or storage. If none of these facilities are available, it would be advisable to put the seeds in a sack and set them in a dry place where there is good circulation. Set the sacks upright and leave a space between them for air circulation.

Controlling Diseases in The Flower Garden
A little planning can take you a long way toward growing disease-free flowers in your garden this summer. One of the best ways to get started is to use disease-resistant varieties. Choose wilt-resistant asters and rust-resistant snapdragons, for example, over the older types.

Don't grow the same annual flower in the same spot year after year. A three or four-year rotation using unrelated plants helps to control soil-borne diseases.

Avoid overcrowding flowers in your garden. With adequate growing space, air circulation is better, more sunlight reaches each plant, disease control is less of a problem. When you water the flower garden try to keep the foliage dry or water in the morning when leaves will dry quickly.

Many gardeners try to control plant diseases after they find them rather than trying to prevent them in the first place.

NEW YORK—With its mother standing close by, a baby flamingo tests its legs in the Bronx Zoo, only two days after it was hatched. It was a unique event for the big zoo, for this little flamingo is the only one ever hatched in the 67 year history of the park. Other mother flamingoes hover in the background, and one more egg (behind the baby) is still being incubated.

Since the basic idea of disease control is a protection and prevention program, this is seldom effective. Once a plant is infected, it is seldom possible to cure the diseased portion.

If you know certain plants in your garden are often attacked by one or more diseases, start a control program early. This is just a good insurance practice that will protect the health of your plants.

To get the best results in using fungicides, select the proper material for the plant and the disease. For flowers like iris and peony that have smooth waxy leaf surfaces, add a spreader-sticker to the spray mixture. Stop spraying just before the material begins to run off the leaves. If you prefer dusting, cover the plants well with a light coating. A heavy coating will do more harm than good by plugging up pores in the leaf surfaces.

It does little good to spray or dust for disease control unless you apply the material regularly and at the intervals suggested on the label. Many of the newer fungicides are organic compounds that break down in one to two weeks. A residue (often the carrier) may be visible but the toxic property of the material is gone. Rain, high temperature and sunlight help decompose the material. Also, as the plant grows, new foliage is left unprotected.

Don't accept the old theory that "if the recommended amount gives control, twice as much should give twice the control." You can actually harm the plants more than the disease organism this way. Even if no injury occurs you are probably wasting the material. For mixing spray materials you should have a set of measuring spoons and a glass measuring cup marked in ounces. A large pail marked off in gallons may also be helpful.

Sometimes garden plants become diseased in spite of a good disease control program. When a large number of leaves become diseased it is better to remove the plant and destroy it, at least remove the affected foliage.

Septoria leaf spot is a common disease of garden flowers easily controlled by the use of protective fungicides. This fungus attacks the foliage of such flowers as aster, dianthus, chrysanthemum, hydrangea and phlox. If you spray the foliage of susceptible plants every seven to ten days, starting soon after planting or after new shoot growth commences, you can almost guarantee against leafspot infection.

Iris may be injured by another leaf spot disease, especially in wet weather. In this case the diseased foliage should be clipped off and burned as soon as it is found. Careful sanitation plus a thorough spray program gives good control of iris leafspot.

If some of your garden flowers become infected with a virus disease, remove all infected plants. Viruses spread throughout the plant and in the case of perennials live as long as the plants remain. Lilies, dahlias, gladioli and asters are some garden flowers commonly attacked by virus diseases.

Infected plants may show mottled light and dark areas in the

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood reading:

Harry Richman, he of the jaunty straw hat and the lisp "Yeth, thir!" is the latest show business figure to join the ranks of memoir writers. The title sets the tone for his autobiography: "A Hell of a Life," published by Duell, Sloan and Pearce, $4.95.

Oddly for a performer who was universally admired within the profession, Richman never scored with the mass audience. His films were failures, and he never hit in radio. By the time television came along, he had lost his voice and his nerve.

Yet fellow stars who saw him in his heyday in night clubs and Broadway shows will testify there was no greater seller of songs. His book, written with Richard Gehman, indicates he had other qualities as a salesman.

"Don Juan himself never had more girls," he writes. "Without bragging, I can say that I had every single one I ever went after. There were more girls than I could have counted with an IBM computer."

Along with the girls came troubles, he admits: "When I wasn't being sued, I was in other kinds of hot water."

"I had around $8,000 to show for a lifetime of work during which I'd earned around $13 million," he says. "And no prospects. And all my nerve gone. I did the ostrich act then: I went away and hid in a gloomy old house in Santa Monica. I paid a year's rent on it and shut myself in, and all I did all day long was sit and stare at television."

Friends rescued him from seclusion and he began to play a few dates, managing a semblance of his once robust voice.

Now he lives with his memories in a small house in the Toluca Lake District, a few miles from Hollywood.

Richman concludes: "I haven't shed a single tear for having made ans spent a fortune. As far as the wonderful words of that old hit of mine still apply to me, you can 'shake hands with a millionaire.' I've had a hell of a life."

Cloninger Flies High

Two Grand Slam Homers Lead Braves To Victory

By MIKE RATHER
Associated Press Sports Writer

"Do you remember touching the bases," Joe Torre asked pitcher Tony Cloninger as they shook hands at home plate.

"I don't remember a single one," Cloninger replied.

But then Cloninger was really flying high as he rounded the bases after becoming the first player in National League history to hit two grand slam homers in one game while leading the Atlanta Braves to a 17-3 annihilation of the San Francisco Giants.

"It was a thrill to hit the first grand slam," said Cloninger. "But the second one was unbelievable."

Cloninger, a 24-game winner last season who started slowly but now has won six of his last seven starts, hit grand slam No. 1 in the first inning on a 3-2 pitch by Bob Priddy and connected for No. 2 on a 0-1 pitch by Ray Sadecki in the fourth inning.

The 6-foot, 200-pound right-hander also singled in another run and, besides becoming the first National League pitcher to hit two grand slams, he added the following records for pitchers to his collection:

Became the first pitcher in either league ever to hit two. Four American League players connected for two grand slams.

—Set a major league record for most runs batted in by driving in nine, breaking the record of seven set by Vic Raschi of the New York Yankees in 1953.

—Tied the major league record by hitting two home runs in one game for the second time in a season. Cloninger hit two against the New York Mets earlier in the year and joined Don Newcombe as the only National League pitchers ever to accomplish that feat.

While Cloninger was tearing up the record book, St. Louis blanked Los Angeles 2-0, Houston defeated Cincinnati 3-1, Philadelphia whipped the Chicago Cubs 6-2 and Pittsburgh outlasted New York 8-7 before the Mets outslug the Pirates in the nightcap 9-8.

In the American League, Baltimore downed Minnesota 4-2, the New York Yankees edged Washington 6-5 in 11 innings, California swept Cleveland 10-2 and 4-3, Kansas City took two from Detroit 3-0 and 10-4 and Boston beat Chicago 5-2 before the White Sox won the nightcap 3-2.

Cloninger, bringing his record to 9-7, also got home run support from teammates Rico Carty and Hank Aaron, who upped his major league-leading total to 25. And he surrendered homers to Sadecki and Tom Haller while allowing the Giants seven hits.

Larry Jaster pitched a three-hitter for the Cardinals, outdueling Don Drysdale, who gave up six hits and took his 11th loss against five victories. Mike Shannon's triple and a single by Dal Maxvill produced the first

Track Crowd Competition Interesting

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Will Hollywood Park in California again outdraw Aqueduct in New York for the July 4 holiday weekend in horse racing that ends today?

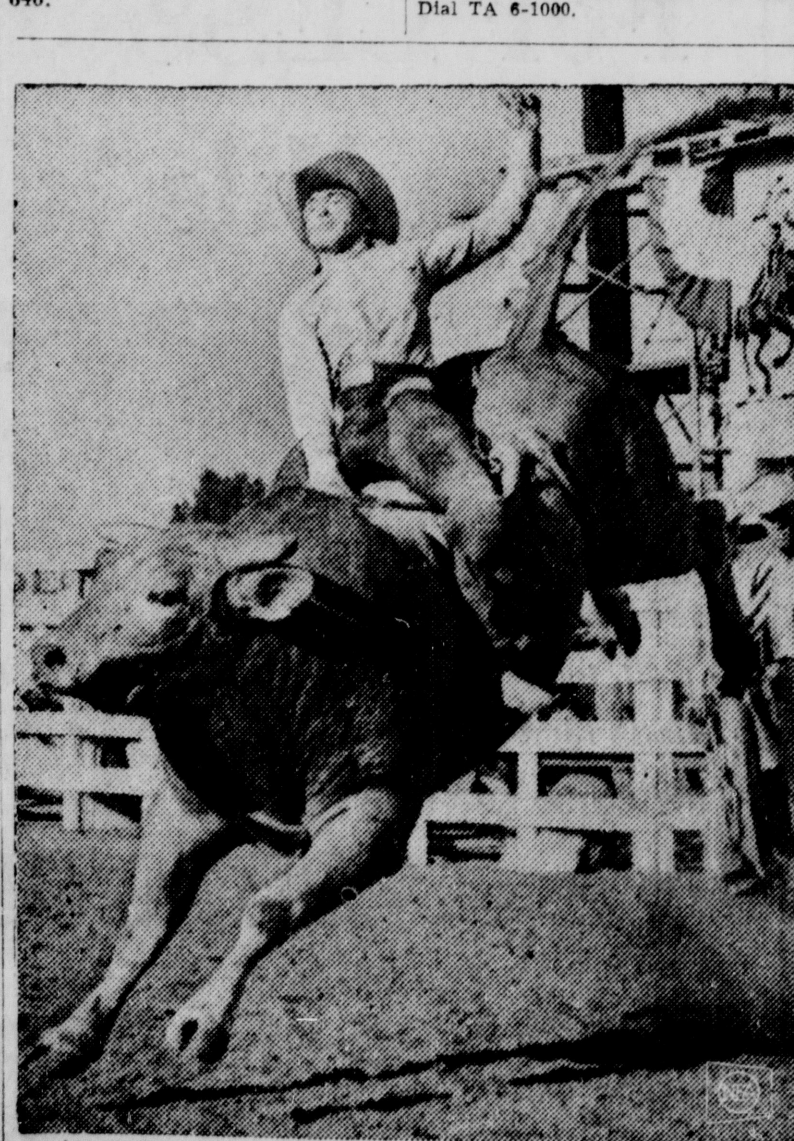

The California track did it on a similar Saturday-Monday setup over the Decoration Day weekend May 28-30 with a two-day attendance of 122,626 to 110,881 for Aqueduct.

Indications are that Hollywood Park will do it again. Attendance there Saturday was 55,459 for the Vanity Handicap won by Khal Ireland, a $41.60 long shot. At Aqueduct 43,350 watched Alexville, $3.80, lead all the way in the Saranac Handicap.

Aqueduct got the nod over Hollywood in attendance on May 30 by 400, 67,587 to 67,187. The Big A expects a similar turnout today for the $100,000-added Suburban Handicap which Bold Lad will try to win under top weight of 135 pounds.

In any event, another banner day is expected on the turf. Last July 4 the attendance at 23 tracks was 439,243 with aggregate bets of $30,482,513.

This compared to the figures of May 30, this year, of 449,776 and betting of $30,764,768 at 23 tracks. If the figures from 13 harness racing tracks are added, the May 30 grand total was 543,506 spectators and $36,383,846.

EIGHT SECONDS on the bull is usually all Larry Mahan needs to break into the prize money. But in bull riding, perhaps roughest of all rodeo events, eight seconds can be an eternity.

St. Louis run in the fifth inning and Lou Brock homered in the ninth.

Chuck Harrison provided all of the Astros' runs with a homer in the fourth inning following singles by Jim Wynn and Felix Mantilla. Larry Dierker, tagged for Don Pavletich's homer in the second inning, checked the Reds on five hits. Hank Fisher lost it, his third without a victory since being acquired from Atlanta.

Bill White smacked a double and a two-run homer, scored two runs and stole base for the Phillies while Richie Allen chipped in with a run-scoring double and a bases-empty homer. Bob Buhl got the victory against his former Cub teammates, winning his fourth in a row with relief help from Darold Knowles in the ninth.

Ed Bressoud hit a grand slam homer and Ed Kranepool hit a solo shot for the Mets in the opener but the Pirates won it with a 16-hit attack that included homers by Jim Pagliaroni, Gene Alley and Dinn Clendenon.

Willie Stargell hit two homers and Bill Mazeroski one for Pittsburgh in the nightcap but the Mets won with a six-run fifth inning built on run-producing singles by Kranepool, John Stephenson and Bressoud, a two-run double by Jerry Grote and Chuck Hiller's run-scoring double.

A's Take Double Header; Cards Beat Los Angeles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City swept both ends of a double header from Detroit, 3-0, and 10-4, and St. Louis shut out the Los Angeles Dodgers, 2-0.

Larry Jaster, recently recalled from Tulsa, was the key performer for the Cards as they managed to take two out of three games from the Dodgers. Jaster went the distance and allowed only three hits to record his third victory of the year against two losses.

The shut out was Jaster's second of the season against the Dodgers. He also turned the trick on April 25.

Mike Shannon's triple and Dal Maxvill's single gave the Cards their first run in the fifth and Lou Brock hit his fifth homer of the season in the ninth. The loss was suffered by Don Drysdale, his 11th in 16 decisions.

Strong defensive play and the pitching of Lew Krausse and reliever Jack Aker carried the A's to victory in the first game. Krausse allowed only 5-hits in 8-1/3 innings, but frequently was pulled from hot water by spectacular defensive play by his teammates. Aker recorded the last two outs without yielding a hit.

Kansas City also was held to 5-hits, but scored single runs in thesecond and sixth innings on infield outs and Roger Repoz accounted for the third tally on a solo homer in the eighth.

The A's staked rookie Jim Nash to a 5-0 lead in his major league debut in the second game. Joe Nosssek started the rally in the third and the side batted around before Nosssek struck out to end it. The rally included a double by Nosssek, a walk, an error, a single, Danny Cater's three-run homer, and two more singles.

Phil Roof singled in one run in the sixth, Campy Campaneris homered in the eighth and the A's picked up three more in the ninth on Campy's double, Cater's single, a sacrifice, a single by Mike Hershberger, Ed Charles's single and an infield out.

Nash worked 6-1/3 innings, allowed 6-hits and all four Detroit runs before Wes Stock and Guid Grilli combined to shut the door the rest of the way. Nash recorded 7 strikeouts and walked three in posting his first victory against no losses.

St. Louis moves up the West Coast to San Francisco today for a holiday doubleheader. Ray Washburn and Nelson Briles will face the Giants' Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry.

Willie also revealed another reason for her continued competition. "I want to go on until 1968," she said. "People don't think I can go that long, and I want to show that I can."

The Olympics will be held in 1968, and Willie is determined to add Mexico City to her travel itinerary.

In the immediate future are the dual meets against the Polish and Russian girls in California later this month. Willie was named to the American team Saturday and also was selected as part of a team which will visit Jamaica.

Orioles Extend Winning Streak To Seven Sunday

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Are the Baltimore Orioles about to break open the American League pennant race before it can get started?

The high-flying Orioles extended their latest winning streak to seven Sunday with a 4-2 victory over Minnesota that stretched their league lead to seven games going into today's traditional staging point for the pennant scramble.

July 4 leaders have gone on to win the flag more than 60 per cent of the time. Last year Minnesota and Cleveland were tied for first place on July 4, three games ahead of the pack. The Twins took the lead the next day and never lost it again, finishing 7 1/2 games ahead of the Orioles.

Baltimore gained 1 1/2 games on each of its closest pursuers — Detroit and Cleveland — Sunday when both dropped doubleheaders. Kansas City stunned the second-place Tigers 3-0 and 10-4 while California swept Cleveland 10-2 and 4-3, dropping the third-place Indians eight games off the pace.

The New York Yankees nipped Washington 6-5 on Bobby Richardson's 11th-inning homer and the Chicago White Sox divided a doubleheader with Boston, beating the Red Sox 3-2 after losing the first game 5-2, in other AL action.

In the National League, Atlanta walloped San Francisco 17-3, Philadelphia whipped Chicago 6-2, and Houston topped Cincinnati 3-1. St. Louis blanked Los Angeles 2-0 and Pittsburgh split a twin bill with New York, outslugging the Mets 8-7 in the first game but bowing 9-8 in the nightcap.

Hydroplane Flies Apart In Cup Race

DETROIT (AP) — Death rode with the nation's top speedboat drivers again Sunday as veteran Chuck Thompson was killed when his massive hydroplane flew apart on the Detroit River during the Gold Cup race.

Fellow drivers, although saddened by the second tragedy to hit their ranks in two weeks, voted along with boat owners to resume the race today. Three drivers were killed June 19 in the President's Cup race at Washington, D.C.

Many of the 300,000 spectators who lined the river banks along the three-mile course screamed as Thompson's boat disintegrated moments after he crossed the starting line at more than 100 miles an hour in what for him was a third heat.

A Coast Guard helicopter swiftly dipped down and plucked the 54-year-old Detroit-er from the water. Physicians applied mouth to mouth resuscitation as he was driven to Detroit's Receiving Hospital but it was in vain.

Race referee Bill Newton said Thompson's 7,800-pound boat, called Smirnoff, "seemed to become airborne momentarily and then smacked down hard on the water."

Stunned Gold Cup officials at first canceled the meet.

Two hours later, however, the race committee and boat owners and drivers decided to resume the race today at the point where death interrupted it Sunday.

James Jost, president of the American Powerboat Association explained. "The original decisions was made under stress of emotion. After examining the rules, we find no provision for such a cancellation and the boat owners after talking it over with the drivers, voted to continue."

Thompson, one of speedboat racing's most popular figures, was cheated out of an unachieved ambition to win the Gold Cup. In a racing career which extended back to 1933, he had won every other major hydroplane racing crown. It was his 12th try for the title when his luck failed.

Thompson in Smirnoff, and Mira Slovak of Los Angeles, in Tahoe Miss, each had won his first two heats with ease.

They did not meet each other until the third preliminary heat and the crowd was set for a duel. The two were expected to fight it out for the point lead before going into the fourth and championship heat.

Physicians said Thompson suffered a crushed chest, a fractured thigh and severe leg wounds.

Lee Schoenith of Detroit, chairman of the unlimited power commission and part owner of the ill-fated boat which Thompson was driving, said the accident was "almost unexplainable."

His father, racing figure Joe Schoenith, speculated, "Smirnoff may have hit a wave from another boat. It seemed to lift in the air and then nosedive."

League's leading hitter with a .337 mark, sent the Orioles ahead 3-2 with a two-out single in the seventh inning. Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson each belted his 16th homer as the Orioles won their 10th game in the last 11.

Low Krausse, Kansas City's former bonus baby, blanked the Tigers for 8-1/3 innings and Jack Aker completed the first-game shutout. Jim Nash, making his major league debut, then held Detroit hitless until the fifth inning of the nightcap but needed relief help in the seventh.

Danny Cater led the Athletics' attack, scoring one run and driving in another in the opener and delivering four more in the second game with a single and three-run homer.

Rick Reichardt drilled his 15th homer in the sixth inning of the Angels-Indians nightcap, tying the score 3-3, and knocked in the go-ahead run with a ground out in the eighth.

Jim Fregosi, who doubled and scored the tie-breaker, had capped a seven-run rally in the second inning of the opener with a three-run homer.

Mickey Mantle's eighth home run in his last six games, and homers by Hector Lopez and Elston Howard paced the Yankees to a 5-0 lead at Washington. The Senators, however, came back with two runs in the eighth before tying it on Ed Brinkman's three-run homer in the ninth. Richardson led off the 11th with his winning homer off Ron Kline.

The White Sox spotted Boston a 2-0 lead in the second game, then came back as Lee Elia delivered two runs with a single and sacrifice fly.

Two Chicago errors and a wild pitch by Hoyt Wilhelm helped the Red Sox score all their runs in the seventh inning of the opener, overcoming a 2-0 deficit. Carl Yastrzemski's run-scoring single sent the Red Sox ahead. Tommy Agee had given the White Sox the lead with a two-run homer in the sixth.

Break World Record In Women's Swim

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A 16-year-old Pompano Beach High School junior, Pam Kruse, broke the world record for women's 440-yard freestyle swim Sunday, her coach said.

The record must be approved by the Amateur Athletic Union before it can become official.

Miss Kruse's coach, Bob Ousley, said she covered the distance in 4:44.3 at the Sheeler-Winton Pool in Miami while swimming against the clock.

The record now is held by Australian Elsa Konrads, who swam the distance in 4:45.4 in January 1960.

The American record of 4:46.4 was set by Martha Randel, Aug. 21, 1965, in Wales.

THE CURRENT RAGE among major league outfielders, it seems, is to take to the stands to catch a fly ball. Tommy McCraw (top) of the White Sox and Rick Reichardt of the Angels had to settle for nice tries.

Expect More Trouble This Summer In City Of Angels

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It could happen any day now. Any day. And Lord God, I'm scared," said the middle-aged Negro. He stared into the dark recesses of his small, cluttered grocery store, then squinted out an cracked front window at the shimmering heat on Watts' 103rd Street.

Outside, in shabby streets still deeply scarred by last August's race rioting, other voices echo the grocer's fear — a fear that has become widespread apprehension as the City of Angels awaits another summer.

Community leaders, average citizens and, perhaps most ominously, idle young people in the sprawling Negro district of south-central Los Angeles candidly expect more trouble this summer, or even sooner.

From John A. Buggs, Negro, executive director of Los Angeles County's Human Relations Commission: "Conditions in the Negro community have deteriorated since the riots because Negro expectations have not been met in terms of actual accomplishments — what they can see, feel, touch."

And along the hot, brooding streets of Watts and Willowbrook as the weeks wear on, young Negroes — the school dropouts, the delinquents, the parolees, the unemployed and the ones who always follow — talk among themselves.

"This time it won't be no six days; this one is gonna go, man," says a young Negro in a blue-green shirt. "It's gonna go til there ain't no whiteys left down here in black country."

Feelings in the Negro area were further inflamed by the May 7 fatal shooting of Negro motorist Leonad Deadwyler by a white policeman and the subsequent eight-day inquest, longest in city history.

Testimony brought out that Deadwyler, 25, was rushing his wife Barbara, also 25, to a hospital in the mistaken belief her fifth baby was coming prematurely. She said officer Jerold M. Bova, 23, shot her husband without provocation as he asked for an escort to the hospital.

Bova testified that a sudden lurch of Deadwyler's car threw him off balance and caused him to reflex, unintentionally firing the fatal shot.

Subsequently a coroner's jury — including a Negro man — ruled the shooting an accidental homicide.

Of the 1,000 buildings either damaged or destroyed in the August riots, only a handful — perhaps four dozen, a city official estimates — have been repaired or rebuilt.

A $98,000 feasibility study for a possible $16.8-million urban renewal program has hung fire because of a federal freeze on California urban renewal funds after the 1964 passage of Proposition 13, a measure that nullified the state's Rumford Fair Housing Act. Proposition 14 was ruled unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court May 10, thus giving the redevelopment study a green light after nine months.

All it took to ignite the fires of August, the most massive race riot in the nation's history, was a routine drunken driving arrest.

For six shocking days, as many as 10,000 enraged Negroes rioted through an area of 50 square miles. All available police power and 14,000 National Guard troops finally quelled the destructive orgy, after clamping a rigid curfew over the riot area and repeatedly scouring the streets block by block to disperse angry mobs.

The costly carnage: 34 killed, 1,032 injured, 3,952 arrested, $40 million in property loss.

Evidence that Negro discontent is not confined to south-central Los Angeles was provided April 16 by more than 100 Negroes in Pasadena, who resisted violently as police tried to disperse a crowd. The battle was a short one, with little damage and few injuries, and waned in three hours, but here, too, the city realized its Negroes could brood, with serious implications, over a seemingly cut-and-dried episode.

How has this condition evolved in Southern California, long regarded as a Negro's paradise, so alluring that Negroes still flock in from the South at the rate of 2,000 a month?

Actually, civil rights leaders predicted long before August that Negro endurance was being strained to the breaking point.

The Human Relations Commission, in a study released only two months before the riots, laid out these statistics:

The county's Negro population, only 75,000 in 1940, rose from 217,881 in 1950 to 461,546 in 1960 — 111.8 per cent — and the city's Negro ranks rose from 171,209 to 334,916 in the same period — 95.6 per cent. There are now an estimated 720,000 Negroes in the county and about 430,000 in the city.

Most Negro newcomers to Los Angeles land in 3.3-square-mile Watts, where the population is 98 per cent Negro, at a density of 27.3 persons per acre, compared with the county average of 7.4.

With Watts as a core, the Negro district broadens south and west to the Pacific Ocean, becoming more and more a darkening ghetto as whites leave.

The commission study revealed a startling fact of Negro life in Los Angeles: In 1950, only 8,753 Negroes lived elsewhere than in the central district, and by far the most of these lived in segregated areas in San Pedro, Venice and Pacoima. In 1960, an additional 12,297 Negroes lived outside the central district, but 10,860 had simply joined those three small ghettos.

Because wages are higher here than in the South, and because discrimination in public places was rooted out years ago, Negroes come expecting an abundant, happy life in Southern California. To a degree, many achieve it.

But they have also found some disappointments. The ghetto character of Negro housing imposes a de facto segregation condition on schools, churches and virtually facets of the Negro child's world.

Negroes receive, on the average, markedly lower wages than do whites of the same educational level, the commission pointed out, and at the same time often have to pay more for poorer rental housing.

When the riots were over, the Governor's or McCone — Commission probing them said: "It stands to reason that what we and other cities have been doing, costly as it all has been, is not enough. Improving the conditions of Negro life will demand adjustments on a scale unknown to any great society.

LINING UP a putt is one of golf's fine arts. Homero Blancas tries to figure the roll of the green by shutting one eye and using the shaft of his putter, held vertically, as a sight.

US Davis Cup Team Hopes High

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The hopes of the U.S. Davis Cup team were high today as the world's tennis stars left England after the 80th Wimbledon tournament.

Dennis Ralston, America's No. 1 male player, from Bakersfield, Calif., just missed the title. But he fought a stirring battle before losing in the final to Spain's Manuel Santana.

Ralston's form gave a lift to American prospects for the Davis Cup match against Mexico at Cleveland in August.

George MacCall, manager of the U.S. team, summed it up.

"I feel our time is coming," MacCall said. "If we get Arthur Ashe in addition to Ralston, we shall have a real chance of winning the cup."

Ashe, the UCLA student who starred on the Australian circuit last winter, has just been drafted into the Army. But he is expected to be able to play against Mexico.

"None of us in the American team grudge Santana his Wimbledon title," MacCall said. "He played magnificently. But Ralston was a worthy finalist, and I think he played better than ever before."

Wimbledon saw the eclipse of the Australians, holders of the Davis Cup. But they had a big share of bad luck.

Roy Emerson, Wimbledon winner in 1964 and 1965, went out painfully in the quarter-finals with a damaged shoulder. Tony Roche entered the tournament with a damaged ankle and didn't get further than the quarter-finals.

"We mustn't kid ourselves," MacCall said. "They'll be fit next December, when the challenge round of the Davis Cup is played. The Australians certainly have suffered a setback here, but they still have some great players."

After Ralston, the rest of the American performance at Wimbledon was less encouraging. Only one other Davis Cupper — Cliff Richey, of Dallas Tex. — reached the round of 16.

Charlie Pasarell of San Francisco, P.R., and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., were eliminated in the second round. Clark Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio, though seeded No. 8, was upset by Australia's Owen Davidson in the first round.

Meanwhile, Billie Jean Moffitt King, of Long Beach, Calif., brought the Wimbledon women's crown back to the United States.

Billie Jean had to fight her way past two former champions — Margaret Smith of Australia in the semifinals and Maria Bueno of Brazil in the final. She defeated both of them convincingly.

Seaport Lives Down Reputation

MANILA (AP) — Manila, the sprawling, historic Philippine seaport, is trying to live down its reputation as the toughest town in the East.

Judging by events of recent weeks, it is going to be a big job.

The once-elegant Spanish fortress city, reduced almost to rubble during World War II, celebrated its 395th birthday late in June and as far as the government is concerned the city's underworld has never had it so good.

A series of well-planned hold-ups by gangs armed with machine guns and carbines, coupled with an increase in the incidence of attacks on tourists, has made the citizens jittery, the tourist board nervous and President Ferdinand Marcos angry.

At a top-level conference with police and government leaders, the president of six months ordered high-powered rifles issued to the local police forces so they can at least match the fire power of the bandits.

Hardly a week goes by without reports of gun fights, murders, stabbings, robberies and other assorted crimes of violence.

It is the shootings and the Filipino obsession with guns and violence that alarms the authorities, particularly the tourist board, which feels the country's reputation for lawlessness is bad for business.

To the tourist, Manila gives the initial impression of being a frontier town in the worst Wild West tradition. Citizens openly walk the streets with the butt of a .38 showing at their belts. And the gun is not for show. The man wearing it is usually not afraid to use it.

Gunshops in downtown Manila sell almost every kind of weapon a gunman could want, from target pistols to high-velocity automatic rifles. Machine guns are available, too, if you know where to shop. Leather shops do a brisk trade in custom-made quick-draw shoulder holsters.

Because so many people carry guns, restaurants and night clubs display signs at the entrance asking patrons to check the guns at the door. Even so, night club shootings are common enough to be accepted as part of night life.

The reputation that it is unsafe to walk the streets of Manila at night has spread to many countries, and despite counter-publicity from the government extolling the true charm and friendliness of Filipinos, the reputation grows.

Serbian Lass Uses Head, Not Power

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Sandra Spuzich, a dark-eyed Serbian lass who used to belt a softball as a clean-up hitter around Indianapolis, used her head instead of power to become the surprising new U.S. Women's Open golf champion Sunday.

Miss Spuzich, who has been one of feminine golf's lesser lights for five years, made the game's biggest title her first tournament victory by capturing the Open and its $4,000 first prize by one stroke over defending champion Carol Mann.

Sandra finished with a 72-hole total of 297 and Miss Mann was second with 298.

It took a rimmed 15-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole by Miss Mann to give the crown to Miss Spuzich, 29, who plays out of the Speedway course in Indianapolis where the roar of racing engines conditions the nerves of any golfer.

But steady-shooting Sandra, who matched Miss Mann's par-equaling 72 at tough Hazeltine National Golf Club after holding a one-stroke lead at 54 holes, said psychology figured in her victory.

"I felt I was thinking out my game better than I ever did and that's the difference between winning and not winning, thinking out your shots," said Miss Spuzich, an Indiana University graduate.

Miss Mann took second money of $2,000 and third-finishing Mickey Wright, frustrated in a bid for an unprecedented fifth Open title, won $1,200 with her 299.

Miss Wright, who had putting troubles after her opening 71, best round of the entire tournament, said she putted well for her closing 73.

Miss Spuzich now has 1966 winnings of nearly $6,000, just shy of her best season, last year, when she earned $8,928 while competing in all 30 official ladies PGA tourneys.

The net effect has been the creation of a widespread distrust among Negroes that the McCone report and its recommendations really take the Negro grievance to heart. "That report was just a whitewash job for the city," many Negroes say now. "That commission just toed the line for the power structure."

—Increasing agitation and proselytizing by a number of growing black nationalist groups.

—Confusion and disillusion in the federal antipoverty program. Many Negroes misunderstood the long-range purpose and process of the program, expecting a fat check in the mail any day now, says a local official.

Buggs, of the Human Relations Commission, feels the riots created, and the succeeding months have deepened, a polarization between Negro and white which has divided the city and harmed the normal course of integration in Los Angeles.

But in this polarization he also sees a hopeful sign — a growing sense of racial identity and self-esteem among Negroes. "Strange as it may sound, the riots made many of them feel a sense of taking a hand in their own affairs for the first time," he says, "and this feeling, ultimately, may enable Negroes to integrate with the white community one day on a more equal footing than they have in the past, quietly, unobtrusively and not really equality."

But he adds: "Just the same, I'm not taking any vacation."

Woman Found Dead,
Beaten In Her Yard

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP)
— A woman was found beaten to death this morning in the yard of her home about a mile northeast of here.

She was Mrs. Jewell Cummins, about 50.

Mike Smith, Cowley County attorney, said the woman had died of multiple blows on the head, but officers found no weapon.

Her husband, Harold, said he found the body about 5:30 a.m.,
when he got up to make coffee.

The body of the woman, found about 50 feet from the house, was fully clothed except for shoes. The shoes were found nearby later.

Rhodesian Struggle Still On

LONDON (AP)—"My Cuba," reflected Harold Wilson recently, "is Rhodesia."

The prime minister's meaning was clear.

He was defending British imperial authority defied when white-ruled Rhodesia seized independence last Nov. 11—just as the late President John F. Kennedy defended American security threatened by Soviet missiles in Cuba.

A false move by Kennedy or Russia's Nikita Khrushchev could have brought nuclear conflict.

Mishandling of the Rhodesia crisis could yet lead to race war throughout Africa south of the Sahara and even in Asia.

Wilson's struggle with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith is still on, partly because he proclaimed in advance that Britain would not use force to reassert authority, partly because he seems consistently to have misjudged the depth of Rhodesian resolve.

Some of Wilson's misjudgments have been frankly acknowledged by British officials as the "eyeball to eyeball" enfrontation — his phrase — has been played out.

—First, Wilson figured former Royal Air Force pilot Smith was a moderate, flexible leader strong enough to dominate extremists favoring a break with Britain. But Smith has stuck with his uncompromising supporters.

—Then, Wilson predicted last January the weight of worldwide economic and oil sanctions ordered by the United Nations would break the Smith regime within weeks. Yet the walls of Smith's Jericho still stand, thanks largely to unofficial aid
from the neighboring apartheid Republic of South Africa.

—Next, Wilson reckoned a face-saving compromise might be accepted by the illegal Rhodesian regime. He began informal talks which were denounced by Africans as the prelude for a sellout. The six-week secret dialogue so far has made little progress.

There appears to be little optimism in Washington, where desian situation with concern,

Such a development would rock if not wreck the worldwide partnership of 700 million people spread across one-fourth of the globe.

Johnson administration officials are reported to see no reason to change current U.S. policy, which boils down to complete backing of the British prime minister in his efforts to oust Smith.

The U.S. sources say they believe Wilson still must face the reality that he could not persuade other African nations or the United Nations itself to accept a settlement of the Rhodesia question which would leave Smith in power.

If time were on Wilson's side
he could relax and simply wait for sanctions to break the back of Rhodesian resistance and so make Smith, or some other leader, glad to come to terms.
This could be a matter of months, or even a year.

But Britain's own economic woes, with the value of the pound sterling in jeopardy, au-tomatically rule out any prolonged or costly campaign against Rhodesia.

INDEPENDENCE

1966

“Hear ye, Hear ye!” And so began the greatest story of our nation . . . the story of our Independence, of our forefathers’ fierce pride and fighting spirit for the freedom, the rights and privileges they believed belonged to men. This freedom is our shining inheritance, our banner among nations . . . to be carried and preserved with watchful vigilance by each generation of Americans. This is the debt we owe this great land of ours. Pridefully do we discharge it so that joyfully we may always celebrate this anniversary of Independence.
